Board Hints Existence Hinges on His Success

Lewis Rebuffed by Miss Perkins as Wage Controversy Reaches Showdown

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board yesterday referred the soft coal wage dispute to President Roosevelt, in effect asking him to break the rapidly spreading strike against the board and its wage policies which has already made 61,000 coal miners idle.

In a formal statement, the board made clear that it had reached the showdown stage with United Mine Chief John L. Lewis, and implied that its ability to continue to function would depend on whether the President succeeds in bringing Lewis to account and makes him submit his case to WLB for a "final determination."

Action by the Chief Executive was expected shortly—probably in the form of a direct appeal to the miners to go back to producing the coal which is vitally necessary to the war production effort.

Rebuffed by Secretary

Meanwhile, Lewis received a rebuff from Labor Secretary Frances Perkins.

In a reply to a letter from the U. M. W. chief asking her to direct mine operators now in Washington to return to New York and resume conferences with the miners, Miss Perkins declared that the war effort requires that work stoppages on the part of the U. M. W. "must cease at once."

She emphasized that the Labor Department had never opposed continuance of the conferences and had urged that they be continued even while the WLB was considering the case.

Making no reference to the submission of the case to the President by the WLB, she strongly supported the board as the proper agency to handle the dispute.

"I have confidence," she said, "in the ability of the War Labor Board to consider the problems involved in the case with fairness and intelligence."

The board's statement was taken as a broad hint that members of the board might resign their posts if President Roosevelt yielded to pressure from Lewis to by-pass its machinery in settling his demands for a $2 a day wage increase and other concessions. To add emphasis to this point, the board recessed its special three-man panel appointed to hear the case, but specifically said it was continuing it in existence "ready to go ahead with its consideration of the merits of the controversy . . . when the miners are back at work."

Ignored by Lewis

Lewis has systematically ignored the WLB since the case was certified to it on April 22. Instead, he has gone ahead with preparations for a general coal strike of 450,000 soft coal miners starting Saturday.

A strike of an additional 90,000 anthracite miners was regarded as possible since negotiations for renewal of a contract which expires Saturday have thus far been fruitless, although they are continuing in New York. The anthracite wage dispute has not yet been certified to WLB.

Asked to comment on the board's action, Lewis was quoted

Mystery Witnesses Defy Congress In Investigation of War Contracts

Mrs. Eula Smith, who refused to testify before a Congressional Committee.

Man and Woman Refuse to Answer Questions on Parties

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A Congressional probe of high-bracket war commissions was temporarily halted yesterday by a man and woman who refused to talk to a House Military Affairs Subcommittee about how the agent of a war plant seeking business "happened" to meet Army and Navy officers at dinner in a fashionable Georgian house at 2101 R Street Northwest, in the heart of Washington's embassy neighborhood.

Principals in the Capital's new mystery, which was left for the full House Military Affairs Committee to try untangling next week, are these:

THE WOMAN. She said she was Mrs. Eula Smith. She was fashionably dressed in a black frock with white collar, and black lace hat. Her smile was charming. But she firmly declined to answer any questions, she said, by advice of counsel.

THE UNTALKATIVE MAN. He was called to the stand by the name of "John Monroe," but he wouldn't say that was his name. He was middle aged, well dressed, dignified in bearing. He would answer no questions for the same reason given by Mrs. Smith.

THE OTHER WITNESS. He was Albert Bennett Fey, former contract agent for a Pawtucket, R. I., machine firm, who said that it owed him $125,000 in commissions when he severed connection with it last year, despite the fact he obtained thousands of dollars worth of war contracts for it. He prompted the mystery questions when he testified that about six months ago he was the guest at a dinner party at the home of a Mrs. Smith, 2101 R Street Northwest. He said other guests included Army and Navy officers and a Mr. Monroe who "had something to do with politics."

REP. JAMES H. MORRISON (Democrat), freshman legislator from Louisiana, who told reporters after the hearing, which he attended, that Mrs. Smith was a "charming lady" and that Monroe was "a nice fellow." Morrison said he had borrowed Monroe's car for several days, had placed on it his own Congressional tags, and omitted to take them off when he returned the car.

Besides telling about meeting Monroe at Mrs. Smith's dinner, Fey identified for the record seven checks totaling $3300 made out by him to "Eula Smith" during two months of last year. The smallest check, for $1500, bore an endorsement to John Monroe.

While the two witnesses would tell nothing of themselves, committee investigators would tell nothing of them either. It was learned, however, that Mrs. Smith had been in the Capital's news before. In 1938, as personal director for a cigar-making firm, she was announcing its plan for an industrial nursery in Florida, and arrangements for Mrs. Roosevelt to attend the opening.

Mrs. Smith and "Mr. Monroe" would not tell the subcommittee whether they lived at the R Street house, or whether they had entertained war contractors and Army and Navy officials at dinners there.

Neither, for that matter, would the House investigators answer the questions which they fired at the witnesses. Representative Davis of Tennessee, acting chairman, adjourned the investigation until next Wednesday when the full Military Affairs Committee will be

Brown Pledges More Fuel Oil, Less Red Tape

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

More fuel oil next winter and less red tape connected with getting it were promised householders yesterday by Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, who said families living in smaller homes would receive "notably" increased rations.

Householders will get renewal application forms from their ration boards late in May or early June, and their coupons as soon as they return them, and it all can be done by mail, the OPA head said.

Meantime, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes wired New England Governors that East Coast motorists need not expect an increase in their gasoline rations at this time.

"East Coast stocks of automotive gasoline have been decreasing steadily and now are below a safe minimum level," he said.

Brown announced that fuel oil rationing would not be extended to additional areas, but said the rationed 33 States and the District of Columbia can expect the coupon system to continue for their areas.

Need for larger allowances for many small homes, he said, was demonstrated by a special OPA

Reds Charge London Poles Plot With Foe

By the Associated Press

London, April 28.—The bitter Russian-Polish diplomatic breach precipitated by Germany's "Smolensk graveyard story" was as wide as ever tonight after a day which brought these developments:

1. Soviet publication of articles which led observers to believe Russia would demand a purge of the Polish government-in-exile in London or the creation of a rival regime on Soviet soil.

2. A London Polish government appeal "for the release" of all fighting Poles now in Russia and a declaration that the Poles "have no need to defend themselves from any suggestion (by Russia) of contact or understanding with Hitler."

The Poles also asked that Russia release "tens of thousands of Polish orphans and children" and families of Polish fighting men, saying that these people—many of whom are regarded by Russia as Soviet citizens—"are particularly precious" to a future reestablishment of Poland "in view of the German mass slaughter" in that country.

3. A Nazi-organized "medical mission" which will conduct an "inquest" at Katyn Forest near Smolensk where the Germans say 10,000 Polish officers were mur-

'Mission to Moscow' Preview Acclaimed by Press Members

More than 4400 representatives of the Nation's and foreign press attended a special preview of "Mission to Moscow" at the Earle Theater yesterday and last night, and left enthusiastically commenting on the brilliant documentary film based on the book of the former Ambassador to Russia.

The vivid film tells the story of how Joseph E. Davies reached an understanding of the Russian people, their leaders and their form of government. It answers many of the questions that were so long unanswered at the time of Munich and the events leading up to the Russo-German peace pact.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President on whose premise of collective security for world peace former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies based much of the theme of "Mission to Moscow," was among the notables who attended the afternoon preview.

Washington's blackout, which came just at opening time of the night performnace, failed to dim the brilliance of the premiere. Guests at the evening showing included Cabinet members, Senators and Congressmen, in addition to members of the press.

The preview of the documentary film was presented by the National Press Club. Its president, Felix Cotten, in an introductory talk, said the preview was given to acquaint members of the American press with the facts set forth by a faith-

Secret Craft Put Ahead of Escort Ships

Plans Sidetracked To Make Way For Special Vessel, Forrestal Asserts

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal yesterday identified as a major factor delaying construction of escort vessels needed to win the submarine battle of the Atlantic a "military decision of the highest order" which pushed aside the destroyer-escort program to free facilities for building a billion dollars' worth of secret vessels of another type.

Forrestal asserted that the program was sidetracked a year ago last February after the gravity of the decision, in the face of then mounting merchant ship sinkings, was made abundantly plain to responsible authorities.

Keels Laid, in Some Instances

Especial significance was attached to the statement in the light of Navy Secretary Frank Knox' acknowledgement Tuesday that Allied ship losses during 1942 exceeded known Allied construction by "something over a million tons."

The undersecretary told the Senate War Investigating Committee that ship ways and other facilities for making destroyer-escorts were turned over to making ships the nature of which he declined to discuss with committeemen except behind closed doors.

In some instances, keels for escort ships were laid when construction was halted, it was learned, while Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, the committee chairman, asserted that Forrestal was referring to the same emergency program criticized by the committee last week in a report on

Mass Executions Made Known To Morgenthau by Chiang

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, April 28.—Japanese troops have slaughtered every man, woman and child in the coastal area of China where American fliers landed after bombing Tokyo, Secretary Henry Morgnthau said tonight.

Morgenthau said his information was contained in a cablegram received from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He read the message at a gathering of war loan workers here.

The Secretary of the Treasury spoke of the horror with which the Nation a few days ago learned that some of the American fliers captured by the Japanese had been executed.

"Now, with a deep sense of shock and anger," he said, "I must bring you further news. I have here a cablegram which reached me this morning. It comes from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Let me read it to you:

"'After they had been caught unawares by the falling bombs on Tokyo, Japanese troops attacked the coastal areas of China where many of the American fliers had landed. These Japanese troops slaughtered every man, woman and child in those areas—let me repeat—these Japanese troops slaughtered every man, woman and child in those areas, reproducing on a wholesale scale the horrors which the world had seen at Lidice, but about which people have been uninformed in these instances.

"'The dastardly execution of these American fliers, who were taken prisoners of war, has made it clear to all Americans that we face an enemy who knows no codes of law or decency. The only language which such an enemy understands is that of the weapons of war, and in the bond campaign which you are pushing for the war effort our people wish you all success.'"

Halifax's Son Calls Himself 'Fortunate'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

A 22-year-old veteran of Montgomery's crack Eighth Army, who lost his legs in a Stuka raid before Tripoli, sat in a wheelchair in the British Embassy yesterday and talked about his good luck.

He was Lieut. Richard Wood of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, third and youngest son of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, and Lady Halifax.

"I am particularly fortunate to be here at all," he said, quietly.

His outfit was chasing Rommel's Afrika Korps last January and was nearing Tripoli when the Stukas came over. One of them aimed a bomb at the truck in which Lieutenant Wood was riding.

"It hit me," he said, "but it didn't go off."

His legs were so badly smashed by the bomb that they had to be amputated well above the knees. He remained in a Cairo hospital until recently, when a hospital plane flew him and another legless warrior, Capt. P. M. Laign of Montreal, across the Atlantic. The British Embassy will be blighty for him for an indefinite period.

Lieutenant Wood was 18 and a student at Eton when Hitler went on a rampage in 1939. Doffing his Etonian collar and high topper, he joined up as a private. The other sons of Lord Halifax (Edward

Chennault, Stilwell Here For War Talks

Two of the Nation's most colorful Army officers arrived in Washington yesterday for conferences on the problems of the war with Japan.

They are Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of the United States Army forces in the China-Burma-India war theater, and Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault, commanding general of the Fourteenth Air Forces in China. They were accompanied by two staff officers, Brig. Gen. William D. Old, Air Corps, and Col. Frank Merrill, General Staff Corps.

The presence of these high ranking officers here on the heels of the execution of our Tokyo fliers caused wide speculation as to their mission.

Their visit also follows reports from the Southwest Pacific that the Japs are massing ships and planes near their stronghold base at Truk. It was recalled, too, that in exchange of felicitations last week between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States Air Forces, General Arnold promised that Tokyo would be bombed around the clock.

Added significance is placed on the visit of the key officers in that it follows closely on the heels of the conference last month between Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, brilliant commander of the Allied air forces in the Southwest Pacific, and President Roosevelt and the Chiefs of Staff.

General Stillwell, who commanded Chinese troops in the Burma campaign last year, is a language scholar as well as a student of Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 28.—The British First Army threw in a powerful assault today against an Axis mountain position only 21 miles from Tunis—the Djebel Bow Aoukaz commanding open stretches of the Medjerda Valley leading down to the Tunisian capital—while American troops completed the storming and capture of three important hill defenses on the route to Mateur and Bizerte.

To the south the French, who are hammering at the gates of Pont Du Fahs, have driven a column southeast of that town to reach the western slopes of Djebel Zaghouan despite heavy Axis artillery fire, the French communique reported. This column cut the main road from Pont du Fahs to Djebibina.

Occupation Believed Near

Other French forces, which had swept forward 15 miles in three days of what official reports termed "magnificent fighting," were beating at the outskirts of Pont du Fahs, in cooperation with British armored columns striking from the northwest.

[The military correspondent of the London Daily Express was quoted by the International News Service as saying Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's Axis troops were reported already to be withdrawing from Pont du Fahs in order to escape a threatened encirclement trap. Allied occupation of the town 34 miles southeast of Tunis, said the writer, "is likely to be announced Thursday."

Faces Main Axis Line

[Later the Algiers radio was quoted by the London Daily Sketch as saying Von Arnim's forces at Pont du Fahs "are now encircled."]

The Germans and Italians fought with savage tenacity against the steady, continued Allied advance—delayed front dispatches told, for example, of the enemy's unavailing use of flame-throwing tanks in one sector—and a military spokesman again declared that the Axis policy to hold every position to the last still obviously was unshaken.

"He (the enemy) will go back only as the result of overwhelming pressure," the spokesman

Nearly 100,000 planes will be produced by United States plants this year, William L. Batt, vice chairman of the War Production Board, yesterday told the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in New York.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land said that the country also will turn out almost 19 million tons of new merchant ships.

African Air Attacks Bar Axis Escape

War Sidelights

Yank Flier Wins Malta Plane Prize

Valletta, Malta, April 28 (AP).—For downing the one thousandth Axis plane destroyed by Malta-based RAF planes in the war, Squadron Leader John Lynch of Alhambra, Calif., today won a sweepstakes prize of £ 19 (-516).

Lynch, who joined the RAF in Canada in 1941, is 25 and a former Oklahoma flying instructor. His wife and child, born since he left the United States, live in Oklahoma. Virtually all R. A. F. members here contributed to the sweepstakes.

Lynch's victory and the shooting down of another Axis plane boosted the total bag of enemy aircraft to 1001 today.

(The one thousand and first victory was for Malta-based planes only. Many more than 1000 planes have been shot down over Malta. A communique last October 13 marked a total of 1,000 enemy planes shot down by Malta defenders—planes and antiaircraft. The British Air Ministry said on November 3 that a total of 1094 had been shot down.)

More Ambergris Around

With the Fleet, South Pacific, April 28 (AP).—War, says an engineer officer, has stepped up production in at least one non-essential field.

Whales, he said, are being tickled by submarine soundings into giving off large amounts of ambergris, a valuable stomach secretion which is used in expensive perfumes and commands fabulous prices.

But, the officer added, everybody is too busy fighting to gather it.

Paul Reynaud in Prison

London, April 28 (AP).—Paul Reynaud, former French Premier, is lodged in a small, dark cell in a Pyrenean prison and is spending the time writing his memoirs which will cause a "sensation after the war," said Pierre Vienot today.

Vienot, French Undersecretary of State in 1936, who recently arrived in England, added: "I visited Reynaud, who is confined in a small cell without sunlight and with water continuously running down the walls."

British and U. S. Working Very Well On Bombing Raids

By Kirke L. Simpson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Axis armies in Tunisia are reeling to their doom under a concentrated Allied air barrage that in the judgment of air experts is only a foretaste of what is in store for Germany itself once the round-the-clock attack from Britain reaches its full scope.

Official figures from Allied headquarters in Africa credit the Northwest African Air Force with having dropped nearly two million pounds of bombs on enemy targets on both sides of the Mediterranean and on his sea supply lines within a single week. The Allies also shot down 240 enemy planes.

The results in Axis planes, shipping, and base facilities knocked out represent an absolute barrier to the escape of any substantial portion of the Axis forces defending the dwindling Tunisian hump, in the opinion of informed Allied military judgment men who cannot be further identified.

"Ideal Combination"

The air onslaught also lends point to the argument advanced by British Air Vice Marshal F. MacNeece Foster, in an address yesterday before the Canadian Club of New York City, that an "ideal combination" of British night and American day bombing has been worked out in raids over Germany within recent months. Carried out on a sufficient scale, he added, it was "capable of producing results which may greatly shorten the war in Europe . . . enabling us both to turn our full weight upon Japan."

"The one great need for an effective air offensive by day over Germany is more aircraft," Marshal Foster said.

There was some disposition in Washington to read into the remarks of so high ranking a British air authority a reply to Australian pleas for a greater allotment of air strength—pleas that Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his spokesmen have supplemented with frequent warnings of growing Japanese concentrations north of the vital New Guinea sector.

Results of Renault Raid

London, April 28 (AP).—Dingle M. Foot, parliamentary secretary for the ministry of economic warfare, told workers in a Scottish factory today that United States Flying Fortresses in their raid on the Renault works outside Paris April 4 damaged more than 40 shops and robbed Germany of at least 1000 trucks and other war materials.

Along the southern end of the front Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army was reported also continuing to advance, making the greater progress along his left, along a harsh and twisted line of march formed by the hard terrain itself, heavy Axis demolitions and many Axis mines.

The Eighth Army is facing the enemy's main fortified line, and the Germans are using perhaps the greatest concentration of artillery that they have employed anywhere outside Russia in their determination to halt Montgomery, said Associated Press Correspondent Noland Norgaard in a frontline dispatch. British artillery is pounding back at the strongly fortified German hill positions.

The German radio commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, said "extensive regrouping" of Allied froces begun Monday was apparently not yet completed, but that it was evident that on the southern front the main weight of the British Eighth Army was "now shifted to the left wing," with Eighth Army reserves also reinforcing British Frst Army troops on the central sector. Sertorious also reported violent "attacks and counterattacks" in the area just south of Medjez-El-Bab.)

The Allied air forces, although limited somewhat by unfavorable weather, kept the enemy's front line areas and his ocmmunications and air fields under strong attack.

The First Army's attack on the Djebel Bou Aoukaz, which lies 12 miles northeast of Medjez-El-Bab as a barrier before the Medjerda plain, carried to about 400 yards short of the crest in the initial operations.

Daniel De Luce, Associated Press correspondent, reported from the front that the British shock troops went in at 4 p. m. yesterday in an urgent effort to smash this last important obstruction between them and the Tunisian plain, charging behind a heavy Allied artillery and bomber barrage.

In related fighting to the east of Medjez-El-Bab. British infantry, supported by Churchill tanks that beat bacgk enemy flame-throwing tanks, seized the small settlements of Sidi Abdallah and Sidi Salem.

To the north, the American forces of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., turned in important progress in the thrust toward Bizerte.

Seized Hills Command Road

The three hills captured by the American Second Corps all command the road to Mateur and Bizerte—the Djebel Dardyss, seven miles from the western shore of Lake Achkel, one of two lakes which reach eastward to Bizerte; the Djebel Ajred (Bald Hill) on the Mateur approaches; the Djebel Azzag which flanks Green Hill, itself forming with Bald Hill a barrier across the Mateur Road.

Dardyss was captured in an American charge through a shoulder-high tangle of gorse and runty trees. Ajred and Azzag were stormed and seized in two columns of a single operation. The fall of Ajred wrested from the Nazis one of their most formidable defenses on the approaches to Mateur. Green hill, although remaining in enemy hands, was threatened by a flanking movement.

Reporting on yesterday's air operations, the Allied command told of a day of "intensive activity" in which the tactical air force maintained "heavy attacks on enemy troop concentrations, gun positions, tanks and transports. Direct hits were scored on many targets and fires were started."

Foe Disintegrating in Africa, Signs on Battle Front Indicate

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the U. S. Army in Northern Tunisia, April 27 (Delayed).—Signs of German disintegration multiplied today as American and French troops continued their slow advance along the line from the Beja area north to the sea.

As French and Arab farmers gathered their first hay crop of the season, Army combat engineers harvested a more deadly crop—mines sown by the thousands in dirt roads and flowering fields as the Nazis sought to delay the Allies long enough to entrench themselves in new positions.

"One of our companies alone picked up 1100 road and antipersonnel mines yesterday," said Capt. Carrol F. Stewell of Merrimack, N. H.

"They seem to be short of artillery, but there are no indications that they are running out of mines. They sure are using them freely here."

With the Germans on the defensive, engineers were so anxious to clear the roads to speed the march on Mateur that they kept up the mine hunt despite falling artillery shells.

As a result, the Americans were able to push forward south of Djebel Sidi Meftah, and forces on the right flank captured a number of Germans in the hills bordering a "mouse trap" position there—a position so called because the Germans had hoped to trap the Americans into rushing out on the plains where they could be swept by Nazis in the encircling hills.

In the Sed Jenane Valley area infantry, supplied by mule pack trains, in Daniel Boone type of warfare raging through pine scrub and cork forests were within five kilometers (3.1 miles) of Lake Achkel.

Soldiers of the French African Corps still were jubilant over the capture of German stores, which included enough shirts to clothe an entire battalion.

London Poles in Collusion With Hitler, Soviet Charges

dered and buried by the Russians.

4. Prime Minister Churchill conferred with Premier Wladyslaw Sikorski in an effort to heal the rupture, but apparently had made little headway. The British were working closely with United States officials in attempting to repair the hole in the United Nations' political lineup against the Axis.

Russia severed relations with Sikorski's government Monday after the Poles had asked the International Red Cross to investigate the German's Smolensk story. The Russians said the Poles in this action had dealt a treacherous blow to the Soviet and had played into the propaganda arms of the Axis.

A Polish statement before the diplomatic break occurred, however, said that while it was well aware of German propaganda efforts, the Poles, nevertheless had never received an adequate answer from Soviet authorities to requests for information about 15,000 Polish army officers, soldiers and civilians imprisoned at three camps by the Russians after the occupation of eastern Poland in 1939.

The whole controversy is deep-rooted. The Poles demand a return of the eastern part of the territory they ruled before their 1939 collapse. The Russians, who took that land over, and were in turn routed by the 1941 German invasion, say that the land historically is theirs.

Today the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia in Moscow printed an article by Wanda Vasilevskaya, identified as president of "the Union of Polish Patriots," in which she said "we are sure the Soviet Union will give us Poles in the Soviet Union the opportunity of fighting for our country shoulder to shoulder with Soviet citizens."

Sikorski Attacked

Vasilevskaya said the Sikorski government in London was illegal and did not represent the true Poland, and observers immediately saw the implied possibility of the establishment of a Polish military or political organization in the Soviet Union.

The Communist Party organ Pravda editorially attacked "the treacherous behavior of the Sikorski government," and accused it of supporting "Hitler's slanderous fabrications" in seeking an International Red Cross investigation of the Berlin Smolensk story.

Pravda reiterated the Russian contention that the Polish request to the International Red Cross was aimed at bringing pressure on Russia to satisfy Polish territorial demands, and said that instead of asking the Moscow government for "an explanation of this matter," it "rushed headlong to join in the anti-Soviet campaign organized by the Hitlerite slanderers."

In London late tonight, the Polish government met after Premier Sikorski and Acting Foreign Minister Count Edward Raczynski had conferred with Churchill at No. 10 Downing Street.

The statement issued by the Poles later did not withdraw the request made to the International Red Cross. Instead, the Poles were believed to have added more fuel to the fire by asking "the release" of Poles of fighting age in Russia along with thousands of members of their families and the orphaned thousands left by Poles killed in battle.

Well-informed sources said Russia contended that many of these now in Russia were Soviet citizens, and that a previous Polish request already had been turned down by Moscow.

The Poles in their statement also said that they "never claimed and do not claim any Soviet territories," and that they had scrupulously discharged their obligations under agreements made with Russia after Germany's invasion of Soviet territory.

This disavowal of any claim to "Soviet territories" apparently refers to the area which the Poles call Eastern Poland and which the Russians say is really part of White Russia. Hence this statement did not change the territorial dispute between the two peoples.

Collusion with Hitler

In her article in Izvestia, Wanda Vasilevskaya accused the Polish leaders in London of being "in contact and collusion" with Germany.

To support this charge, she suggested that that was the reason for the removal from Russia of re-formed Polish troops under Gen. Wladyslaw Anders, and also that a statement by Biship Josef Gawlina that 400,000 Polish children had died in Russia was a "nonsensical, slanderous accusation" in line with anti-Soviet propaganda.

Last January the British India Office announced that more than 100,000 Poles under General Anders had left Russia under a November, 1941, agreement between Russia and Poland.

These men, supplied with British food and clothing and Russian arms, were moved to the Middle East to fight against the Axis.

Japs' Kiska Airbase Blasted in 13 Raids

B-17 Crew Fights Nature For 66 Days

With the U. S. Airforce in the South Pacific, April 18 (Delayed). The Flying Fortress copilot saluted his commanding officer, Maj Richard Stepp of New York City, on Guadalcanal and reported:

"Major, we have completed our mission after 66 days."

Sixty-six days of hell were compressed into that sentence by the modest airman, Lieut. Ernest C. Ruiz of Santa Barbara, Calif.

These segments of an amazing adventure were thus condensed:

A running, bloody battle on February 9 with eight Japanese Zeros . . . every one of the nine-member crew wounded . . . the bomber badly shot up . . . a forced landing at sea . . . 15 days adrift in rubber rafts . . . provisions exhausted . . an emergency catch of a bass, a bird and a shark (the shark tasted terrible).

Marooned for Weeks

Weeks on weeks marooned on small coral islands in the heart of Japanese-controlled waters . . . befriended by half-starved Melanesian natives who insisted the fliers shave daily (so they did it with broken glass) . . . a native doctor's removal of a bullet, with a piece of glass as the surgical instrument . . . a daring attempt of some of the men to reach friendly land in an outrigger canoe, which capsized . . . two more weeks of waiting to repair and replenish supplies.

A new start . . . terrible moments of suspense while a Japanese plane flew low over the canoe (but the feared spray of machinegun bullets didn't materialize) . . . arrival at a new island where a marooned Jap was discovered and killed attempting to flee . . . at long last, a navy flying boat from Guadalcanal which picked up the men in the canoe . . . then the rushing of food, dropped by army planes, to the others back on the islands . . . and finally aerial return of all to the base they had left "on a routine mission."

The nine heroes, in addition to Ruiz, were Capt. Thomas J. Classen, West de Pere, Wis.; Lieut. Robert J. Dorwart, Seattle; Lieut. Balfour C. Gibson, Berkeley, Calif.; Sergt. Don Martin, Decatur, Ill.; Corpl. W. H. Nichols, Keiser, Ark., Sergt. James Hunt, Effingham, Ill.; Corpl. R. J. Turnbull, San Antonio, Tex., and Corpl. Thedore Edwards, Youngstown, Ohio.

A tenth man (unidentified in the dispatch) was encountered on the islands and was rescued with the others.

Craters Torn in Runway by Fliers; Buildings Wrecked

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

American and Canadian airmen gave the Japanese base at Kiska a heavy pounding Monday, destroying a number of buildings and digging craters in the airfield runway, the Navy reported yesterday.

United States Army fliers carried out 11 separate attacks during the day, the communique stated, scoring bomb hits on the enemy main camp area, and the installations at North Head, as well as damaging the airfield, and destroying buildings.

Liberator and Mitchell bombers and Lightning and Warhawk fighters made the assaults, while the Canadians, flying American-built Warhawks, made two other attacks.

North Head is at the northern entrance to Kiska Harbor and is believed by military men here to be the site of Japanese coastal batteries.

The Navy communique also revealed that American planes from Guadalcanal had attacked Japanese bases in the northwestern Solomons Tuesday. Early in the morning Liberator heavy bombers assaulted Kahili and Ballale in the Shortland Islands area. They also bombed Vila in the Central Solomons.

Fires were started at both Ballale and Vila, the Navy said.

That afternoon five Boeing Flying Fortresses gave Kahili a second going-over, but weather conditions prevented observation of the raid results.

Defeat Japs, Chandler Warns; Says War May Go On for Years

Calling for greater military concentration on the Pacific war, Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky declared last night that if the Japanese are given more time to dig in, the conflict "may last 10 years or 20 years or may go on forever."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces must be strengthened to enable him to carry the war to the enemy, Chandler said in a speech prepared for broadcast over the Blue Network.

"It may be possible," he said, "that he does not even have enough fighter and bomber planes to meet minimum requirements for holding off a possible Japanese invasion of Australia.

"It is cruel enough not to supply him with sufficient planes to make an offensive against the Japs in the South Pacific, but it is suicidal and tragic to speculate on the safety and security of the Australian Commonwealth by failing to give him adequate air power to prevent a threatened invasion. . . .

Dutch Harbor's Close Call

The Kentuckian, chairman of a special Senate committee that investigated military establishments in Alaska and the Aleutian Islands last August, said military men agreed that if the Japanese had attacked Dutch Harbor in force in June "they would have taken that important and strategic harbor."

The loss, he added, would have cut off American supplies to Nome and given the whole Aleutian chain to the foe. The committee was so impressed with the danger, Chandler said, that it appealed to the President for prompt addition of troops, planes and equipment.

Japanese completion of air landing strips on Kiska and Attu, he declared, would constitute a menace to the Pacific area, and because they have established themselves on the islands, Chandler added, "it will be very costly to us in men and materials to dislodge them."

Expressing fear that Government officials and military men fail to realize the seriousness of the Pacific conflict, Chandler said he did not believe they ever countd it a major war.

Fears Long War With Japs

"It is suicide, in my opinion," he asserted, "to permit the Japs time to dig in in the south Pacific. If they are given this time, I fear that they will grow so strong—both economically and militarily—that the war in the Pacific may last 10 years or 20 years or may go on forever."

Chandler said the Government had no assurance that America could expect help from Russia in the war against Japan.

"And while I know of Mr. Churchill's declaration to help us bomb Tokyo," he said, "I also know of his speech a few weeks ago in which he at least hinted of the possibility of a partial demobilization of the British when the war in Europe is ended."

Chandler said that, while it is necessary to destroy Hitlerism, he would "hate to see a time come when the United States would have left on its hands a war with Japan with all of its disadvantages and the help only of China—a gallant nation without arms."

Yanks Bag 10 Jap Planes in Kunming Attack

By the Associated Press

Chungking, April 28.—American fighters were reported semiofficially to have shot down 10 Japanese planes out of a force of 40 which attacked Kunming, capital of Yunnan Province, southwestern China, this morning.

Meanwhile, in the Taiheng Mountains, scene of the bitterest fighting in China in many months, a Chinese communique said Japanese assaults "have shown signs of weakening."

The Chinese, "while resisting frontal attacks, kept portions of their troops at previously advanced positions and started to attack the enemy in the rear as he advanced," the war bulletin said.

In a counterattack west of the mountains the Chinese inflicted heavy losses and in another sector forced a Japanese column of more than 4000 men to retreat. A third enemy column was reported trapped and "facing imminent annihilation."

Rangoon Hit Hard

New Delhi, India, April 28 (AP).—United States Liberators delivered another heavy blow at Rangoon, chief port in Japanese-occupied Burma, starting fires and severely damaging warehouses in the vicinity of the central railway station on Monday, a communique announced today.

Medium bombers also attacked railway targets at Thazi Junction, 70 miles south of Mandalay, and scored hits on the engine sheds, warehouses, freight yards and tracks.

Enemy fighters gave battle on both raids, but were beaten off without an American loss and several of the Japanese planes were damaged in the 40-minute fight which began at Rangoon and extended over the Bay of Bengal.

American Warhawk fighters also strafed and bombed enemy troops in northwestern Burma.

R. A. F. planes ranged wide over western Burma yesterday attacking a variety of targets as a lull settled over the Arakan land front following several days of sharp fighting, a British communique announced.

Blenheim bombers hit supply dumps at Akyab and the village of Magyichaung at the tip of the Mayu Peninsula, starting fires, while fighters attacked factories, highway transport and river shipping.

All British planes were reported to have returned safely.

Oriental diplomacy. After his troops were driven from Burma he declared that with additional American planes and probably some American troops, Burma could be reconquered.

General Chennault, who was in command of the famous Flying Tigers in China, recently pledged himself and the American China Air Task Force to drive the enemy from China "or exterminate him."

"It is our job," he said at the time, "to drive him out or to exterminate him. I pledge to drive the Jap from China or kill him."

Plane, Bus Crash Kills 11, Injures 6

London, April 29 (AP).—Eleven persons were killed and six badly injured when a plane fell onto a bus in southeast Scotland and covered it with blazing gasoline yesterday afternoon.

Two R. A. F. fliers, eight naval ratings and the bus driver were killed. There were 18 others in the bus.

Soviet Fliers Down 40 German Planes

Tragic Jest

Seaman Slain In Shooting Joke on Ship

By the Associated Press

Port Washington, Wis., April 28.—A youthful merchant seaman's dare and its acceptance, in jest, by a Coast Guardsman ended in tragedy aboard the coal freighter O. S. MacFarland last night.

Sheriff Roland Schaefer of Ozaukee County said Second Class Seaman George Henry Sagel, 19, of the Coast Guard admitted the fatal shooting of John F. Hopperton, 16, of Cleveland, a seaman aboard the MacFarland.

No State charge was brought against Sagel, whose home is at Chicago. Milwaukee Coast Guard officials took him into custody pending the findings of a board of inquiry.

Sagel, a guard on the MacFarland, awakened Hopperton at 9 p. m. when it was time for him to go on unloading duty.

The sheriff said Sagel told him that Hopperton jokingly declared he would not get up and dared Sagel to shoot. There had been previous jesting exchanges of that nature, Sagel related.

But last night, he told the sheriff, he drew his service revolver and shot from the hip. The bullet struck Hopperton in the left eye, killing him instantly.

The sheriff reported that Sagel claimed he had no intention of shooting Hopperton and thought that when he pulled the trigger the hammer would fall on an empty chamber.

Russian Army Told To Prepare for Decisive Battles

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 29.—Russian airmen and gunners yesterday destroyed 40 German planes, 23 of them in the Caucasus, but there was only scattered minor ground fighting, Moscow announced early today.

The government newspaper Izvestia called on the Red Army to prepare for decisive battles "which are in the offing" as Soviet airmen continued to pound the enemy's rear lines where the Germans were bringing up reserves for future operations.

The midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, said Russian airmen shot down 15 German planes in the Kuban River valley sector above Novorossisk in the Caucasus, and anti-aircraft gunners bagged eight others.

The other 17 German planes were downed in the Balakleya sector southeast of Kharkov in the Ukraine where the Red Army still holds firmly to its Donets River defenses.

Artillery duels and scouting operations marked the Caucasian and Ukraine fronts, and there was a renewed flurry of small engagements on the Leningrad and Volkhov fronts in the north.

The Berlin radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said German airmen had attacked the Russians along the Sea of Azov after observing Soviet attempts "to repair and strengthen" ports in that area.

2 D. C. Area Men To Army Air Forces

Two Washington area men were among 16 American officers who yesterday were transferred from the R. A. F. and the R. C. A. F. to the U. S. Army Air Forces, the Associated Press announced from London. The men had been serving as fighter and bomber pilots, gunners and observers.

Among the new transfers were Douglas Saunders of Washington, John McIntire of Chevy Chase, Md., and Jack Berry of Parkersburg, W. Va., who recently received the Distinguished Flying Cross for carrying out a one-plane raid on Bremen in daylight, from which both crew and plane returned safely.

26 of 47 Survivors Returned to New York

New York, April 28 (AP).—Twenty-six of 47 survivors of a medium-sized United States merchant vessel torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in mid-March in the middle Atlantic, have been returned to New York, the Navy announced today.

RETURN OF HOPE—Three Americans and an Australian, marooned for 10 months in Jap-held New Guinea wave frantically as a Yankee bomber circles over them. It dropped a note telling them to be ready for rescue and a few nights later an Australian craft flew in and took them to safety, along with natives who had helped them. They had built huts on the shore and were at work on a boat when saved. The Americans were Lieut. Marvin C. Hughes of Baird, Tex.; Lieut. Eugene Wallace of Los Angeles and Private Dale E. Bordner of Chillicothe, Ohio

U. S. to Make 100,000 Planes in 1943, Batt Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—Production lines of the United States this war year will turn out nearly 100,000 airplanes and almost 19 million deadweight tons of dry cargo vessels and tankers, business chiefs of the Nation were told today.

Vice Chairman William L. Batt of the War Production Board, speaking before the annual convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, gave the figures on plane production, adding that this meant an increase of approximately 50,000 planes over 1942.

At the same time Batt, departing from his prepared address, said that "management and labor must be prepared for idle plants in wartime."

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, told the gathering that the ship production of almost 19 million tons in the country's yards in 1943 compares with more than eight million tons built in 1942.

The admiral described the record made by the shipping industry during the last two years as 'the greatest shipbuilding chapter in world history."

Land added that the Nation has the capacity to build at least 20 million deadweight tons of shipping annually as long as necessary, and asserted that if the steel and essential manpower are available "we can produce approximately 2000 merchant ships a year."

Director of the Office of Defense Transportation Joseph B. Eastman, said the ODT regarded travel rationed "as a last and desperate resort" to be used only if the public failed to adjust "its travel habits to war necessities."

Ship Named for Carver to Be Launched

By the Associated Press

The Liberty ship George Washington Carver, named for the late Negro scientist, will be launched next Sunday at the Richmond, Calif., No 1 yard of the Kaiser Shipbuilding Company, the Maritime Commission announced today.

The Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for a Negro, is in active service under a Negro master, Captain Hugh Mulzak, and another, the Frederick Douglass, is under construction at Baltimore.

The United Negro Labor Committee, in charge of the launching of the George Washington Carver, has chosen Lena Horne, singer, as the sponsor. A Negro employe of the yard, Beatrice Turner, will be maid of honor.

Time Magazine reports under the heading "Cigaret Mystery"

THAT—the best-seller cigarette among U.S. troops in London last week* was Chelsea, a comparative newcomer, which outstripped all combined old-established brands 2½ to 1.

*April 12th issue

Here is the simple explanation:

Chelsea has given SERVICE...timely, practical SERVICE—when service was needed! Actually Chelsea's representation overseas is but 3% of the total overseas cigarette volume.

But boats don't wait for brands! Due to the uncertainties of wartime transportation, it is not always possible to govern the distribution of the various brands when the convoys sail.

Service is the simple explanation of the above "mystery." Naturally, we are glad that Chelsea Cigarettes were available...

It is a matter of record that Army specifications call for only the highest quality foods, cigarettes—in fact, all supplies for our soldiers.

The makers of Chelseas are proud—not only of the high quality of our cigarettes—but of the services which we have been able to render the Armed Forces.

Has any other Cigarette Company given the Armed Forces greater service?

SINCE Pearl Harbor this company resolved to direct its energies and facilities in "all-out" service to the Armed Forces. The record, in part:

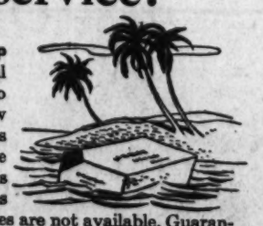
FIRST to package and deliver cigarettes in "4's" for the famous Field Ration "K."

FIRST to package and deliver cigarettes in "3's" for the Field Ration "C."

FIRST to package and deliver the tobacco supplement of the Field Ration which is given to the troops where sales stores are not available.

FIRST to package and deliver cigarettes in odd-size tins, utilizing material allocated to the Army for a special purpose. (Contract completed 2 months ahead of expected schedule.)

FIRST to develop water-proof overall package for tobacco products. (Note: now an Army overseas specification for the industry.) Makes possible floating cases ashore where wharves are not available. Guarantees cigarettes to be in first class condition in extremes of climate.



The company also operates two large plants—on the East and West Coasts—for the assembling and packing of assorted brands (of various tobacco manufacturers) in waterproof, space-saving cases. Thus providing overnight service to ports of embarkation.

...because they're BETTER

Chelseas are FRESHER when you open the package. Notice that new moisture-retaining, silvery gray inner wrapper—a basic improvement in packaging.

Chelseas are RICHER to your taste—a rich blend of 16 select grades of imported and domestic tobaccos.

Chelseas are CLEANER SMOKING—because the tobaccos are "air-washed" to remove small tobacco particles.

DISCOVER CHELSEA, the better cigarette, yourself. Look for the handsome white package—at your favorite dealers.

'Mission to Moscow' Preview Acclaimed by Press Members

ful reproduction of Davies' diary while he was Ambassador to the Soviet Union, so they might be reported to the Nation.

There was a deep and almost reverent silence through most of the showing, with few of the usual foot scrapings and coughs which mark an ordinary film. At the end there was a great burst of applause which ended only when the theater orchestra drowned it out with the finale.

Former Ambassador Davies opened the film with a prologue in which he explained his reason for writing "Mission to Moscow" and allowing it to be produced on the screen:

"Unity among the forces fighting Hitler was vital; nothing as I saw it was more important than that the fighting nations should understand and trust each other. There was so much prejudice and misunderstanding of the Soviet Union in which I once partly shared that I felt it was my duty to tell the truth about the Soviet Union as I saw it, for such value as it might have."

The former Ambassador explained that his beginnings were those of the average American. Born of pioneer stock, he went to the University of Wisconsin and later to Washington as one of Woodrow Wilson's young men and then practiced law successfully. He emphasized that he had a deep conviction and firm faith that the American form of government is the best the world has yet produced for the common man.

"I went to Russia with that conviction and I returned from Russia with that conviction. But while I was in Russia I came to have a very high respect for the honesty of the Soviet leaders. . . . I also came back with the firm conviction these people . . . and their leaders most desired to live as good neighbors in a world at peace."

Tells of Assignment

"Mission to Moscow" tells how Davies was summoned to Washington by President Roosevelt and sent to Moscow to get the facts about Russia. He arrives in Europe at a time when Hitler is building up his war machine and preparing for conquest. Stopping off in Germany he puts forward a suggestion by President Roosevelt that nations scrap all arms but what can be carried on shoulders, and evokes laughter in Berlin.

While Davis in is Russia, reviewing the Red Army, inspecting industrial plants, oil fields and the like, the great "purge" takes place. The film leaves no doubt that the Russian military men, statesmen and editors who were condemned were traitors, seeking the aid of Germany and Japan to overthrow the Stalin regime.

The Munich Conference

Stalin tells Davies that Russia is prepared to help defend Czecho-Slovakia if France does likewise. Then comes the Munich conference in which Britain and France agree to appease Hitler with a strip of Czecho-Slovakia. Davies is on his way to America when he hears that Russia has signed a non-aggression pact with Germany, which was a prelude to war.

Back home, Davies tried to arouse his countrymen, and the film shows him seeking to persuade congressional isolationists and making speeches from one end of the country to the other. When Germany attacks Russia, he confidently predicts that the Russians will hold out. The picture ends with Pearl Harbor and America's entry into the war.

Lord Halifax's Son, Legs Off, Calls Himself 'Fortunate'

Frederick Lindley Wood) likewise went into the army. Captain, the Hon. Charles Wood, the eldest son, is now believed to be in Africa. The middle son, Lieut. Peter Wood, was killed at El Alamein in the furious attack of last October.

When the lanky Ambassador strode into the ballroom at the Embassy yesterday, his youngest son came with him, rolling along smartly in his wheel chair.

A fine-looking youngster with reddish hair and mustache, his face was still ruddy from the African sun. He wore the summer uniform of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, and obviously was very proud of it. He explained that his outfit was organized in this country in 1755 to fight the French and the Indians. Known in the beginning as the Sixty-second Royal American, then as the Sixtieth Royal American, it got its present name in 1830.

Lieutenant Wood said he was very glad to be in Washington. The contrast of the white buildings and the green trees and grass, he said, gave him a most "delightful feeling." His father had written him much about Washington and he had longed to come home here.

"If I hadn't been wounded," he said, "I would have had to wait a long time. Therefore, there are some good things about being wounded."

He praised the equipment that the United States rushed to Egypt when Marshal Rommel was threatening to break into the Nile Valley, particularly the Sherman medium tank and the Jeb Stuart light tank. This equipment, he said, had much to do with the turn of the tide at El Alamein. But a prime factor, he said, was the arrival of Generals Alexander and Montgomery to take over from other commanders who were suffering from "desert weariness."

There were three Americans in his outfit, Lieutenant Wood said, Heyward Cutting, Charles Bolte and Bob Cox. All were "leftenants," and all were wounded. He said they had joined up in Winchester, England. He pronounced it as the British do and a reporter didn't catch the name.

"What you call Win-chest-er," said Lord Halifax, grinning.

LET'S HOLD BOTH ENDS OF THE LINE!

You are being dragged in the dust with us.

You are being dragged toward higher food costs, higher clothing costs, higher costs on everything.

Your grocery and butcher shop bills tell the story. Compare the price of pork chops, of potatoes and milk with the prices you paid a year ago. These prices have risen despite repeated promises of effective price control.

Prices have not been frozen.

But you are being frozen in your wages, and frozen in your jobs.

Do you like it?

We don't.

We don't want inflation. We aren't asking more than our share.

But others are. They are getting it out of us—and out of you.

The War Labor Board protected you and us.

So it was stripped of its power.

OPA was intended to keep down your living costs and ours.

It isn't doing that job.

We propose a real, just and workable stabilization program:

Prices should be rolled back to September 15, 1942. ★ Wage rates should be stabilized on the basis of equal pay for equal work. ★ The War Labor Board's power to correct inequalities should be restored. ★ Equalization of wage rates for similar work will end job shopping practices and make unnecessary any dictatorial job freeze. ★ To achieve full production and full utilization of manpower, all war plants should be required to operate at least 48 hours a week, or guarantee the workers 40 hours pay. ★ To obtain adequate food production we should extend long-range credits to the small, working farmers, ensuring them an adequate supply of seed, fertilizer, fencing, land, labor and machinery.

2½ Billions Cut From War Contracts

Savings totaling $2,539,000,000 have been effected by the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission through price reductions in war production and renegotiation of contrtcts between Aphil 28, 1942, and March 31, 1943, OWI disclosed yesterday.

Of this total, $955,100,000 represents actual refunds by contractors and $1,583,900,000 represents reductions in contract prices, OWI said.

Widespread criticism and obvious over-charges for some types of war production led to resurveys of contract costs as the war effort swung into high speed.

Importance of Speed

Government officials, however, long recognized that overcharges were rampant, although it was conceeded that production speed was of first importance at that time.

Many times, OWI pointed out, it was found necessary to reexamine original prices so as to eliminate excessive profits which were not anticipated by either contractors or the procurement officers at the time contracts were signed.

OWI said price reductions and cash refunds are being negotiated daily by the three agencies, "but not at the expense of production."

Unit Prices Compared

Some current unit prices, compared with unit prices a year ago, were cited. The included:

Bombers (airframes only), $160,000 and $235,000; fighters (airframes only), $72,000 and $84,000; attack bombers (airframes only), $64,000 and $76,000; automatic pilots, $2200 and $$2900.

Parachutes (assembly), $70 and $90; generators, $490 and $590; X-ray field units, $1060 and $1270.

Seventy-five-millimeter tank guns, $2150 and $3000; 20-mm. antiaircraft cannon, $840 and $1280; 30-caliber machine guns, $230 and $290; 50-caliber antiaireraft machine guns, $450 and $640.

High-explosive 105-mm. shells, $19 and $24.50; 2500-horsepower engines, $96,000 and $110,000.

Brown Disavows Herring Plan To Overhaul OPA

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown disavowed yesterday a plan of former Senator Clyde L. Herring, who in his capacity as Mr. Brown's senior assistant has been surveying OPA administration for the last month with a view to overhauling it.

Mr. Herring caused considerable alarm among the OPA rent control staff earlier when he proposed doing away with the existing organization of regional and area rent offices and placing rent matters in the hands of local ration boards.

When some of the rent staff protested to Mr. Brown yesterday he issued a memorandum saying Mr. Herring's statements "do not reflect my views." Mr. Herring said he did not know whether this memorandum would have any effect on the recommendation he intends to make in the next week or 10 days, and he had not discussed the matter with Mr. Brown.

Unions Sue to Upset Kansas Control Law

asked to decide the next step in questioning the witnesses. H. Ralph Burton committee counsel, advised newsmen to stick to the record of yesterday's hearing.

The R Street house around which the questioning revolved was once the home of the late Dr. William Holland Wilmer, Washington eye specialist, who died in 1936 after listing among his patients a number of Presidents of the United States, the King of Siam, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and others of the famous.

Fey's seven checks were paid to "Eula Smith," between April 16, 1942, and June 26, 1942. They totaled $3300, and one for $150, dated May 29 last year, was indorsed over to "John Monroe." Six of the checks were drawn on a Washington bank, and the seventh on a New York City bank. The largest was for $1500, the smallest for $150.

Mrs. Smith said at the outset she had been advised by counsel not to talk on the ground that answers "might be used to incriminate me".

Chairman Davis sought to obtain the name of the lawyer who had given the advice, but Mrs. Smith declined to answer that, too.

She Won't Talk

She declined to answer questions about whether she knew the preceding witness, Fey, or had been consulted by him about war contracts, or introduced him to Army or Navy officers or other Government officials. She would not answer questions about whether she leased the house at 2101 R Street, or whether she lived there, or had entertained any Army or Navy officers at her house. She would not say whether she knew John Monroe, nor would she say whether she had anything to do with procuring contracts for industrial plants.

While the next witness appeared in answer to a subpena made out for John Monroe, he announced that on advice of counsel he would not answer questions.

He volunteered, however, the information that his wires had been tapped, that agents had been "acting funny" with his friends, and that he had been told by a New Deal official that he was to be "persecuted."

Among the questions hurled at the witness, and left unanswered, were whether he had changed his name in 1940 from Kaplan to Monroe, whether he lived at 2101 R Street Northwest, or entertained Army and Navy officers there, or received all or part of his income from Government contracts.

He was also asked about his car, and whether it carried congressional tags, and where they came from. He was asked whether he had done any business with a Louisiana oil company. To the series, he gave the consistent reply, that he declined to answer on "advice of counsel."

Fey testified that he went to work for the Pawtucket firm when it "didn't have a nickel," that he arranged for a number of war contracts for the firm, but severed his connection after about a year with the firm owing him $125,000 in commissions. He collected, he said, $2700 in "pocket expenses" for his work on one contract, and $21,250 in March last year for services in connection with another contract.

She Had Been 'Helpful'

As for the checks to Mrs. Smith, Fey testified that she had been "helpful in putting me in touch with people." He said his calls at the R Street residence had been purely social, and that he could not identify the officers he had seen there.

3 Days to Go, City Exceeds Bond Quota

With three days yet to go, Washington last night apparently had reached its second war loan campaign quota of 42 million dollars—and the money still was rolling in.

Tabulated sales through Tuesday, and the figures do not reflect purchases for at least one day and probably longer, aggregate $40,440,618, or 96.3 per cent of the nonbanking quota. This was an increase of $1,835,794 over the total announced the day before.

Buying Continues

And even with the goal already reached, it appeared that the District was going to keep right on buying until the drive officially ends Saturday night.

City-wide preparations were being made for the "Remember Our Martyred Flyers" observance tomorrow when Washingtonians will be urged to help avenge, through the purchase of still more bonds, the American airmen killed by Japan in reprisal for the raid on Tokyo.

The District Commissioners, "greatly gratified" by citizens' response to the war bond campaign, declared yesterday in a proclamation:

"We have learned that Friday is to be designated as "Remember Our Martyred Flyers Day." We are heartily in accord with this idea and hope that the day may be signalized by the display of our Flag and the purchase of War Bonds, by individuals to the limit of their ability."

Flag Display Tomorrow

Granville Gude, president of the Washington Board of Trade, speaking for the city's business interests, expressed the hope that tomorrow "will record the largest amount of bond purchases on any single day since Pearl Harbor," and urged the cooperation of business establishments in flying flags and arranging special window displays."

Meantime, banks yesterday reported war bond sales were continuing at the fast tempo of the past several days with nothing to indicate that residents have exhausted their bond-buying means or intend to slack off now that the quota is believed to have been subscribed.

Lions Club Active

William C. Hanson, war bond chairman of the Lions Club, reported his organization has sold a total of $125,375 in Second War Loan securities. A sizable increase over this amount is anticipated, he said, when all reports are in from his committee members.

The Washington Council, Knights of Columbus, set a goal for itself of $77,500 when the campaign was launched. Yesterday it proudly announced, through War Bond Chairman Richard A. Mahar, that orders totaling $114,000 have been received—almost 50 per cent above the quota. Additional sales are expected before the campaign ends.

The bond rally underway at the Hecht Co. will be highlighted today by the appearance of Irving S. Cobb, the renowned humorist, and a fashion show of service uniforms worn by women in the last war. Cobb will appear at 5 p.m., speak briefly, and autograph the war bond covers of security buyers. The fashion show, arranged by Helen Virginia Meyer, well known costume historian, will go on at 2, 4 and 7 p.m. An added feature, at 3 p.m., will be some vocal numbers by Seaman Luke Williamson, who was soloist with Tommy Tucker's band before donning Navy garb.

An interesting sidelight of the display of Norman Rockwell's "Four Freedoms" paintings at the Hecht rally came to light yesterday when it was learned that Charles Peterson, production manager of the Curtis Publishing Co., brought the paintings from Philadelphia here by train, making two trips to do the job and carrying the paintings in his lap.

20% Withholding Tax Adds Nothing to Bill, Doughton Says

Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina of the House Ways and Means Committee declared last night that the 20 per cent withholding provision of pending pay-as-you-go tax bills "will not result in a single extra tax dollar being taken from the taxpayers' pocketbook."

He issued his statement, he said, to clear up "considerable misunderstanding throughout the country" over the withholding provision, one which is common to both the proposed bill of the committee's Democratic majority and various compromises and substitutes.

"The proposed 20 per cent withholding provision is only a method of collecting currently all or a part of the taxes imposed by the existing tax laws," Doughton explained.

Not on Gross Figure

"The 20 per cent withholding figure is not applied to the taxpayer's gross wages or salary. Three per cent of this 20 per cent would be withheld from each payment of wages or salary which exceeds the victory tax exemption of $12 per week, or $624 a year, and would be applied on the victory tax owed by the taxpayer.

"The remaining 17 per cent is withheld on the amount of the taxpayers' wages or salary which exceeds his regular income tax personal exemption and credit for dependents plus 10 per cent of his exemptions and credits to allow for average deductions, such as interest payments, charitable contributions, other taxes paid, etc. This 17 per cent would be applied on the individual income taxes owed by the taxpayer."

Heavier on Some

Doughton said that from some will be withheld more than is needed to pay their taxes and from others less.

"Therefore, all salary and wage earners will be called upon to file a regular income tax return on March 15 of each year, just as they do now, reporting the actual amount of taxes owed by them on their previous year's incomes," he continued.

"The amount which has been withheld from their wages or salary will be credited against the actual taxes owed. If too much has been withheld the taxpayer can get a refund."

Sees Disaster Threat

Boston, April 28 (INS).—Failure of Congress to adopt the Ruml pay-as-you-go tax plan contains the threat of a major economic disaster, Joseph W. Martin, jr., House Republican floor leader, said tonight.

Passage of the bill, he said, "would remove the threat of a big tax assessment in a period of recession—a disaster which might come from a heavy tax remand in a year of small incomes."

The North Attleboro Congressman, in an address at the annual banquet of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Jewelers' Association, reiterated his promise to lead a Republican push for the adoption of the Ruml plan on his return to Washington Monday.

Martin protested exclusion of Eastern motorists from the recent announcement that new tires would be made available to "B" gasoline card holders

Panagra MAKES GOOD NEIGHBORS CLOSE NEIGHBORS

VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE

flies Panagra to visit

Five South American Countries

Saturday Vice President Henry A. Wallace returned to the United States from one of the most important journeys of his long public career. For six weeks he has been traveling over vast areas of Central and South America—talking and listening to the peoples of many of our sister republics—forging ever firmer the bonds of mutual good will that unite this hemisphere for Victory.

From Panama south, a regular transport plane of the PANAGRA fleet, flying routes charted, developed and guarded by PANAGRA technicians, bore Mr. Wallace to Colombia, to Peru, to Chile, to Bolivia, to Ecuador, and back to Colombia. In all, PANAGRA transported Mr. Wallace some 7000 miles.

We are most appreciative of this further opportunity to make good neighbors close neighbors.

Pacific Hero Father-and-Son Night Feature

Washington's talent turned out in force to entertain last night for the Brotherhood of Washington Hebrew Congregation's nineteenth annual father and son night, at which underprivileged boys from three schools were guest of honor.

Hit of the evening, however, was no professional entertainer. He was Pvit. Morris Umans, who lost a leg in the fighting on Guadalcanal, when a Japanese shell exploded beside his fox hole.

Private Umans told the audience that the boys on the fighting fronts were giving the enemy everything they had, and asked only that they be backed up on the home front.

Besides the Brotherhood fathers and sons, boys from St. Joseph's Home, Bethesda Baptist Home and Swartzell Methodist Home enjoyed the acts, features and personalities presented. Speakers included Herman Norwood, president of the Brotherhood; Linn C. Drake, Scout executive, National Capital Area Council, Boy Scouts; Capt. Robert Workman, chaplain, U. S. N., and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, who delivered the closing prayer. Radio Announcer Arthur Godfrey was master of ceremonies.

The program was interrupted by the blackout, but the dark interval was filled by motion pictures and music by the Eighty-ninth Coast Artillery Band.

Among the acts presented were Evelyn Knight, singer; Elbert Sisters, dancers; George Horn, ventriloquist; Little Jack Little, singer; Sergt. Sidney Chivian, pantomimist; exhibition table tennis by Stan Fields and Sol Rytter, former Eastern and D. C. champions, respectively; a father-and-son quiz conducted by Walter Compton, radio announcer, and introduction of ten outstanding professional athletes and Clark Griffith.

Day Bond Sale At Hecht Store Hits $650,000

War bond sales in the Treasury Department-Saturday Evening Post bond show at Hecht's reached $650,000 yesterday, as Washingtonians paid in bond pledges for articles auctioned off by Dave Elman of radio's Hobby Lobby program.

A life preserver from the United States Coast Guard cutter Campbell—which rammed and sank six enemy ships in 24 hours—was knocked down for $21,000 in war bonds.

A $500 bond pledge won for a District resident two original manuscripts of stories which have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, while several school children gave their savings for autographed reproductions of Norman Rockwell's "Four Freedoms" paintings and a group of war stamp albums signed by Film Stars Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and others.

A small vial of sand taken from a two-man Japanese submarine captured at Pearl Harbor went to a Washington woman whose $25 bond bid was not challenged, after she stated quietly that her son was now "somewhere in the Pacific islands, fighting the Japanese."

Manning the sales booth on Hecht's fourth floor yesterday were Daughters of the American Revolution, under the direction of Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton.

Petition Shows Rathbun Estate Valued at $72,000

Principal beneficiary of the will, which registers stocks, bonds, cash, notes and household effects, is Seward Hume Rathburn, teacher of architecuture in Central High School, who is to be given the sum of $20,000 and what remains of the estate after other bequests are subtracted.

Other bequests include $10,000 to the Smithsonian Institution to further scientific work, $5000 to Dr. Waldo Schmitt of the National Museum, and relatives and friends and servants are scheduled to receive sums from $100 to $5000.

Gen. Olds Dies at 47 In Arizona

GEN. ROBERT OLDS

Maj. Gen. Robert Olds, 47, founder of the Army Air Force Ferry Command, died yesterday in Tucson, Ariz., after a long illness, the Associated Press reported.

General Olds, former commander of the Second Air Force, went to Tucson for his health shortly after he was relieved of the command of his unit last February 24. He was suffering from arthritis when he first arrived in Tucson, and pneumonia, followed by complications which brought on a heart attack, was given as the immediate cause of death.

He was born in Forest Glen, Md., and attended Central High School. He joined the Air Corps when he was 19, just two months before the United States entered the first World War. After duty at San Antonio, Tex., Scott Field, Ill., and Ellington Field, Tex., Olds went to France as a captain in 1918, and was assigned to the Clermont-Ferrand instruction center as officer in charge of training. He joined the staff of the Second Army Air Service at Toul.

For his air exploits he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Service Medal, the ribbon of an officer of the Southern Cross, Brazil, and the Victor Medal, the Mackay and Harmon Trophies.

General Olds was married here last June to Mrs. Nina Gore Auchincloss, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, who survives him. Other survivors are four sons by a former marriage —Robert, who will graduate from West Point in June and who was an All-America tackle last season; Steven Meigs, a West Point underclassman; Sterling Meigs, and Frederick Meigs—and his mother, Mrs. Robert Olds, sr., who lives in Forest Glen.

Bicentennial For Jefferson Continues

"Thomas Jefferson Still Lives," last words of John Adams who died a few hours after Jefferson, will be the theme of celebrations planned in honor of the third President's two hundredth anniversary by the Bicentennial Commission, which yesterday announced a general program for the remainder of the year.

The Gilbert Stuart potrait of the "Father of the Declaration of Independence," painted in 1805 and owned by Bowdoin College, Me., has been selected as the official portrait of the commission, and reproductions will be available to schools, libraries and other institutions.

Schools throughout the Nation will be asked to give special assistance in the commemoration, purpose of which is to bring the ideals and principles of Thomas Jefferson to the attention of all communities. The resources of the radio, newspapers, magazines and libraries will also be enlisted.

Ready for distribution within two weeks will be the first two of several scheduled pamphlets about Jefferson to be issued by the commission: "Thomas Jefferson, April 13, 1743—April 13, 1943" and "The Thomas Jefferson Quiz Book."

A technicolor picture based on Jefferson's life and achievements is being produced under the commission's auspices, and plans for distribution through South America, as well as in schools and service camps, are being considered.

The Thomas Jefferson Bicentennial Commission is also issuing suggestions for school and community programs in preparation of commemorative programs, especially for the Fourth of July, in Jefferson's honor.

Sheep-Killing Dogs Ordered Hunted Down

In an effort to stop an outbreak of chicken and sheep killing by dogs, Prince Georges County police have been given orders to shoot any unlicensed dogs running at large, especially in the rural sections of the county.

The order was issued by the county commissioners after Arthur W. Hepburn, chief of the county police, and the State's attorneys office had complained that packs of dogs had caused serious damage to farmers.

Hepburn yesterday warned dog-owners that they were responsible for any chickens or sheep killed by their dogs and advised the owners to keep the dogs tied up or penned. He said the killing of domestic animals by dog packs had so increased in the past two months that drastic action was necessary to stop it.

The county law provides for a tax of $1 for a male dog more than 6 months old, and $2 for a female. The tag furnished by the county upon payment of the tax must be worn by the dog at all times, Hepburn said.

Storm Kills 3, Injures 150; 500 Homeless

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio, April 28.—Northern Ohio counted three dead tonight and destruction mounting upward of four million dollars as it dug out of debris strewn by a series of tornadoes that left nearly 500 homeless and injured more than 150.

The twisters, Ohio's worst since the Lorain tornado of June 28, 1924, struck freakishly in 11 widely separated sections of Cleveland, slashed through Akron and a dozen smaller communities, damaged nearly 2000 homes and crippled several war plants.

Ray Myers, chief communications officer of the Summit County civilian defense organization, estimated damage in the Akron area alone at two to three million dollars, while Cleveland reckoned its loss in excess of one million.

Killed in the storm were: Arthur C. Cawrse of Cleveland, vice president of the Dairymen's Ohio Farmers Milk Co., as the tornado destroyed or damaged all the buildings on his farm near Oberlin; and Richard Paternoster, 12, and Anthony Fernbach, 9, Akron orphans, trapped in a barn which collapsed on a farm near Medina.

C. G. Andrus, Government meteorologist at Cleveland, said four separate tornadoes—their paths all short and narrow—swept over the city, and added the area was fortunate not to have suffered greater loss of life because "the tornadoes were death-dealing in intensity."

More than 100 Akronites were treated for injuries at hospitals and in their homes, while Cleveland's injured totaled 52. At least seven others were injured in other communities, two near Bellevue and five in the Tiffin area.

Confronted with the task of sheltering and feeding 50 homeless families in house-short Akron, Chairman William G. Roderick of the Red Cross appealed to Washington for disaster relief workers.

Meanwhile, 800 civilian defense volunteers, working on three-hour shifts, patrolled the stricken sections round-the-clock to curb looting that started in the damaged homes.

Power Lines Damaged

The storm interrupted telephone service in 7500 homes in the Akron area, plunged hundreds into darkness and damaged about 1000 dwellings in all Communication lines gradually were restored, but the Ohio Edison Co. reported repair of its power lines would not be completed for two days.

Air cadets training at Akron University salvaged food and guarded wrecked homes at Mogadore, 8 miles away, where between 40 and 50 families were homeless. Village women opened a commissary in a church to feed the families.

One hundred homes were virtually demolished at Cleveland and 900 others damaged in varying degrees as the storm caved in and ripped off sides of houses, razed them from foundations and shattered thousands of windows. The entire roof was lifted off a two-story, four-family apartment in Lakewood, Cleveland suburb.

The Red Cross set up emergency relief quarters at Cleveland to provide food, shelter and clothing for at least 30 families. John D. Cremer, jr, executive director for organization, said Cleveland workers would be able to meet requests for aid without outside help.

War plants crippled by the storm included the B. F. Goodrich Co., here, which estimated damage at $250,000 and said about 10 per cent of its production force was made idle. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., reported damage to one of its buildings was substantial and that some workers were made temporarily jobless.

Republic Steel Corp., estimated its Cleveland facilities were damaged to the extent of $25,000.

In the path of the storm were Tiffen, Bellevue, Norwalk, Mansfield, Fremont and parts of Clark County.

Dutch Airmen Bomb 2 Jap Ships To Standstill

United Nations Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), April 29 (INS). Two Japanese merchantmen were bombed to a standstill yesterday by Dutch airmen flying American Mitchell medium bombers, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique announced today.

Pouncing on the enemy cargo ships in the Arafura Sea north of Australia, the Dutch airmen roared in at mast height to rain direct and near hits on the ships. Both vessels were stationary and one was blazing as the airmen left the scene, a communique said.

Other Allied bombers attacked Japanese bases on New Guinea, New Britain and in the New Ireland group.

Girl Kidnaps Baby To Get Doll Clothes

Chicago, April 28 (INS).—A 12-year-old girl who confessed the kidnaping of a 2-months-old baby because she wanted the infant's clothing for her doll, was back at her home tonight, paroled to her mother.

The baby had been left in its buggy in front of a neighborhood store. The little girl, Marilyn Ricksecker, wheeled the baby around the corner to an alley, where she stripped the infant of its bootees, cap, coat and pillow.

WLB Asks Roosevelt to Break Spreading Soft Coal Strike

in New York as saying: "I have no comment to make at this time at all. I will see the press in the morning."

Meanwhile, the strikes which were still technically unauthorized by the U. M. W., had closed down about 130 mines, with 32,000 miners idle in Pennsylvania, 18,000 in Alabama, 7000 in Kentucky and 6000 in West Virginia.

Pointing out that it had telegraphed an appeal to Lewis and other U. M. W. officials to "urge the workers to return to their jobs," WLB stated that "this request has been ignored by the officers of the United Mine Workers to whom it was addressed."

"Under these circumstances," WLB said, "the only possible course for the board to follow is the course which it consistently follows in cases where either the employes or the employer defies an order of the board. The board is, therefore, referring this controversy to the President in accordance with its established practice."

Authority at Stake

Making it clear that it believed its authority and its procedures were at stake, WLB said:

"The board firmly believes that to maintain those procedures against attack from any source is essential to the winning of the war; that this particular dispute can and must be handled like any other dispute under these established procedures.

"It is the unanimous conviction of the board that any departure from these procedures in this particular case would destroy the entire plan for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes during the war."

Predecessor Was Smashed

Lewis succeeded in smashing WLB's predecessor — the now-defunct National Defense Mediation Board by tactics similar to the ones he is using now. Many of the present members of WLB including its chairman, William H. Davis, served on the NDMB. Lewis has bitterly assailed the WLB as a "packed court against labor," and has also denounced Davis as a "Park Avenue patent attorney."

Lewis' antagonism toward the board is an outgrowth of its application of the "Little Steel" formula, application of which would work to deny the miners a general increase. An alternative route to a wage increase—by claiming the existence of "inequities and inequalities—was choked off by the President's "hold-the-line" order.

There was speculation yesterday that the President might send troops into the coal fields to police the mines in the event that Lewis' defiance continued. It was also regarded as possible that Lewis would be indicted for conspiracy to violate the October 2 Stabilization Act, if the strike continued.

Present coal stocks presented some slight cushion against possible immediate disaster to large numbers of war plants in the event of a coal strike, but some operations were expected to be affected almost immediately, with the effect spreading with continuation of the strike.

Luther Harr, bituminous coal consumers' counsel, stated that "a general strike would be little short of mutiny. Even a few days stoppage of mining would have serious repercussions on our war effort, the effects of which might be felt for weeks."

A spokesman for the United States Steel Corp. in Chicago declared that operations of the firm's large steel plants in the Calumet region of Illinois and northern Indiana would be reduced 25 per cent during the first week of a coal strike.

43 Days' Supply

As of March 1, the Solid Fuels Administration reported a 43 days' supply of soft coal above ground, with railroads averaging a 28 days' supply, but with the supply in the hands of central and western roads only 17 days. The country's steel mills have a national average supply to last 29 days.

"The National War Labor Board is not now informed about the merits of the pending controversy," the WLB said. "Following its usual procedure, it has set up an investigating panel to define the issues and to collect and state the relevant facts and make its report to the board.

"The final determination of the controversy . . . will, of course, be based upon a careful consideration of the facts and issues as presented to it by the panel report and after hearing the parties. In the meantime, all the rights of the mine workers are protected by the retroactive provision, which makes any final determination retroactively effective as of April 1, 1943. . . .

"The National War Labor Board unanimously and deeply believes that the people on the home front in the United States are filled with a calm but grim determination to exert their very utmost efforts for maximum production of those war materials which are necessary to conserve the lives and to crown with success the war efforts of their sons and brothers who are at the fighting front."

Brown Pledges More Fuel Oil

analysis of more than 3 ,000 individual rations. This showed that the floor-area method for setting reasonable limits resulted in "disproportionately large cuts on the average" for smaller houses.

The adjustment upward will cover homes using central furnaces and having a floor space of 600 square feet or less in the northernmost States, 800 square feet or less in the Middle Atlantic tier, 900 square feet or less in the next group south, which includes Washington, and 1,000 square feet in the southernmost group.

Other Adjustments

"A similar type of upward adjustment will be made for dwellings heated by oil stoves, with the exception that the dividing line will be lower," Brown said. "That is adjustment for oil stoves will be made for houses of 450 square feet or less in the most-north zone, and 550 square feet or less in the other three."

Under this change, a householder living in Maine who heats by a central furnace and whose essential living and sleeping space amounts to 400 square feet will receive an increase of about 26 per cent in his basic ration, the OPA said.

Basic rations for very large homes will be raised somewhat by increasing from 2,000 to 3,000 square feet the maximum area which a single person is permitted to heat.

Rations will be allotted on the basis of five periods, but there will be a more generous "overlap" of the validity dates of coupons, with each period's remaining valid through the following period.

Reserve Coupons

An additional feature of the simplified plan will be the issuance of consumer reserve coupons, which will be attached to the coupon sheet and have an aggregate value equal to about one-sixth of the individual's heating ration. These will be valid for use at any time during the heating year.

Approximately one-third of the season's coupons will become valid around July 1, to permit the filling of tanks during the summer.

Administrator Ickes, whose wire was a reply to requests from the New England States for more gasoline, declared all available information shows civilian use has been increasing at the same time additional military needs were being met. Continued cold weather has delayed transportation schedules, although 70,907 tank cars have been shifted to East Coast service.

Improvement in transportation can be expected, he said when the Great Lakes and New York barge canal open for the summer, and the 24-inch pipe line to the East Coast is completed.

Pay for Returning Soldiers After War Urged by Rankin

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Legislation to keep American servicemen on the payroll for six to nine months after they are demobilized following World War II is being drafted by Representative John Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, as an answer to any demands for a bonus.

Rankin, who is chairman of the House World War Veterans Committee, led the successful fight in Congress for the increase in base pay for enlisted men from $30 to $50 a month and for years advocated cash payment of the World War I bonus to former servicemen.

"After this war is over there will be millions of men returned to civilian life after years of service abroad," Rankin said yesterday. "It will take time for them to readjust themselves to civilian life and pursuits, and a grateful country can do nothing less than to give them six months with pay in order to rest and prepare themselves for work as civilians.

Rankin said "a bonus fight in this country, like the one following World War I, will be to the disadvantage of both the former service men and the Nation, and Congress should take steps now to provide for the payment to the men, after they are discharged, not in a big lump sum that might be spent in one spree, but over a period of months."

"I hope these men and their relatives will hold together on political issues," he added, "because men who have fought and bled for their country, men who have saved the Nation, have the right to say what they want their Government to do. It is my hope that they do not sell themselves out for a bonus, which I consider a mistake we former service men of World War I made."

Norwegian Ship Sunk

London, April 28 (AP).—The loss of the Norwegian destroyer Eskdale by enemy action was announced today by the Norwegian government-in-exile.

Escort Destroyers Sidetracked for Secret Ship, Forrestal Says

ship building.

"The destroyer escort program would also be further along had it not been for the decision to build a large number of special naval vessels advocated by the British for uses which have not yet materialized," the report stated.

"They required materials and the use of machine tools and other facilities which it now appears could have been better used for destroyer-secorts."

Forrestal was a witness before the committee as, for the second successive day, it searched unavailingly for evidence fully to substantiate charges by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson that War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson's decision last January to give synthetic rubber a top claim on materials so shortened production of 100-octane gasoline that the Army had to keep combat training planes on the ground.

The day's other witness, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, who has direct responsibility for aviation gas production, was asked by Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan, if the war effort were being delayed "for lack of gasoline at the present time." Ickes, who also is Interior Secretary excused himself from making a positive statement on grounds that he is not a military expert.

In a prepared statement, Ickes referred to the "current shortage" of high-octane gasoline. Nevertheless, he proclaimed at the same time that the petroleum industry, under the guidance of his office, has been able to produce high-powered motor fuel in excess of military goals. All this was accomplished, he stated, in the face of myriad obstacles, including materials delays for which he blamed WPB and an early but "really baffling lack of understanding by many persons in high authority, of the vital essentiality of 100-octane."

Truman wanted to know who these persons in "high authority" were. Ickes replied:

"Well, I would almost have to give you a catalogue of Washington (laughter).

"Some were military (authorities) and some were naval, but in the final analysis we could not get materials and there is only one source for materials in Washington."

Earlier in his testimony, Ickes unmistakably named that source as WPB as just as unmistakably gave Nelson's agency a high place in a listing of six reasons why the Secretary's program for construction of new high-octane facilities has fallen well below expectations.

Ickes drew up a long bill of particulars against WPB and earlier production-managing agencies. He described as the "last wallop" the decision by Nelson to give a top "over riding" priority for 43.6 per cent of Rubber Director William M. Jeffers' synthetic program as against the competing claims of Patterson, Forrestal and Ickes for valves and other parts needed to make rubber, aviation gasoline and escort vessels.

In the interest of "history" and "impartiality," Ickes checked off other blows, which included WPB's failure to make available steel plates for new gas plants until March, 1942, and then only in a "harum-scarum manner."

Starting in November, 1941, Ickes said, his office made 30 "demands" upon war production agencies for direct allocation of gasoline-plant construction materials. It was not until last April 19 that his prayers for full scheduling were answered with a directive that applied to all plants, Ickes stated.

Despite these obstacles, the petroleum industry, said Ickes, "will produce this month more fuel every day than the official requirements figures extant last July indicated would be necessary at this time."

Nonetheless, he asserted that "failure to receive parts for new plants constituted a very serious setback," and estimated for the committee that Jeffers' preference directive caused a loss of 4,413,600 barrels of aircraft fuel.

The Secretary also was critical of military and naval authorities. He said official estimates of aviation gasoline requirements were "almost impossible to obtain." Not until May, 1942, he asserted, did he received a "semiofficial" estimate and "even that was based on a then obsolete plane program."

The subject of public controversy versus official cooperation was brought up. Ickes remarked: "I am the best cooperator in Washington—when I can have my way." To which Truman replied:

"That is the trouble. All of you are good cooperators when you can have your way. Somebody ought to knock your heads together."

Forrestal protested an "impression" given the committee Tuesday by Nelson that the Navy was tardy in developing its escort-ship program. The importance of these ships was recognized by the Navy, he declared, in 1940.

Nelson had stated that escort-ship requirements were not available until last February. Forrestal explained that by this time the Navy was able to submit a breakdown of its program in terms of materials requirements and delivery dates for component parts. No comparable schedule, he said has yet been submitted for gasoline and rubber.

Forrestal stated that he was "not even complaining" about Jeffers' directive, but was opposed to over-riding directives as "unsound procedure."

"This intervention . . . can completely nullify the scheduling work which we have done for escort vessels," he declared. "It can erase our whole escort vessel time table and unbalance our Navy program."

Forrestal said that "up to now" the Navy has "enough" fuel for its planes. Patterson, he thought, was speaking "to the general point of apprehension" when he predicted that the air offensive over Europe this summer would be "materially weakened" unless the rubber directive were quickly changed.

"If Judge Patterson's apprehensions are well founded, and I think they are, then I believe we should have apprehension for the future," he said.

Refugee Parley To End Tomorrow

Convicts Sought in Kidnap Threat

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, April 28.—Georgia Gov. Ellis Arnall today defied a threat to kidnap his 5-year-old son unless he "called off" a search for two fugitive desperadoes, ordered the hunt redoubled and offered a $250 "dead or alive" reward.

The Governor placed his son, Alvan, under armed guard and called the FBI to investigate a telephone call reportedly from Leland Harvey, who with D. C. Black fled the Bibb County Jail in a spectacular break last night.

Harvey and Black were leaders in a mass break by 2b convicts from the State penitentiary April 16. They were lodged in the county jail at Macon, Ga.

The threat was received at the Governor's mansion today, first by a nurse and then by Mrs. Arnall. The Governor's wife said the caller identified himself as Harvey, asserted he was calling from a downtown Atlanta address, and that Black was with him.

"He said that all he and Black wanted to do was to get out of Georgia, and unless I called off the hunt for them, and let them get across the State line they would do bodily harm to both Mrs. Arnall and me and kidnap our boy," the Governor said.

Harvey and Black obtained a pistol through a Negro jail trusty, surprised the Macon jailer and fought their way out after firing one stray shot.

C. U. Rector Gets 5-Year Appointment

The Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of Catholic University since June 1942, has been appointed rector of that institution to serve for five years, it was announced yesterday. Advice of the appointment came from Pope Pius XII in Rome and was received in Washington by Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate.

The first alumnus to be chosen for the office, Monsignor McCormick is the university's oldest cleric in point of service, having come here in 1910 as instructor in education. He was appointed vice rector in May 1936, and was twice acting rector, first from August 1935 to March 1936, then following the death of the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan last June.

Instructor in education, from 1910 to 1914, he then became associate professor of education, then full professor and head of the education department. He has served also as dean of the Catholic Sisters College, part of Catholic University.

Born in Norwich, Conn., December 10, 1880, the son of Daniel J. McCormick and Margaret E. (O'Donnell) McCormick, He was educated in St. Patrick's parochial school at Norwich and later attended the public schools there. He studied for the priesthood at St. Joseph's Seminary, Dunwoodie, N. Y., from 1899 to 1904 and he was ordained at Hartford on July 26, 1904, by the late Most Rev. Michael Tierney, bishop of Hartford, and upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the Holy Priesthood in 1929 he was created a domestic prelate by the late Pope Pius XI with the rank of Monsignor.

He has contributed many articles to the religious and lay press in educational activities and is the author of "History of Education," published in 1914. He collaborated in the preparation of "The Cyclopedia of Education" and "The Encyclopedia of Sunday Schools." He has been editor of the Catholic Education Review since 1921, and president of the Catholic Education Press since 1932.

Henry Given Even Chance To Recover

Jeffries D. (Jeff) Henry, 36, former District policeman, who shot and killed his third wife in a downtown drugstore, Tuesday, remained in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital last night from a self-inflicted bullet wound.

He was reported to have an even chance of recovering. The bullet, fired from a .32-caliber revolver, struck his ribs and was deflected, preventing a fatal injury, doctors said. Fifth Precinct police maintained a constant guard at his bedside.

Mrs. Lola Jane Scott Henry, 26, brunette wife of the thrice-married former policeman, died instantly with a bullet through her heart at 7:50 p.m., Tuesday. The shooting occurred before a horrified group of diners at a pharmacy at 1109 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

Witnesses told Detective Sergt. John K. Baker, homicide squad, that the couple had been talking quietly in a booth for about 10 minutes. Henry, it was said, suddenly pulled a gun from a hip pocket, fired once at his wife and then turned the gun on himself. When he fell his head was pillowed on her lap.

Police learned Henry and his wife had been separated and that she arrived in Washington this week from New Orleans to attend the funeral of a sister, Mrs. Virginia Reynolds. Mrs. Henry was staying at 1217 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Needs, Queries, Gifts Besiege Red Cross

Depository for anything ranging from a wooden leg to whale bones and supplier of help to people who want to know how far is up or need the loan of a raincoat for one day—this is the information desk at District Red Cross headquarters, 1730 E Street Northwest.

The majority of questions concern prisoners of war, but in course of a day's time, the staff gets queries like this: Where can one buy Chinese candy? What is the name of a good clothing store in San Diego? Where can one dispose of scrap? And this classic: Where is the Red Cross reproduction room?

Whalebones Donated

Gifts, too, come in to the information desk. A local corsetiere donated 200 whalebones, which came in nicely for smoothing out surgical dressings. One widow contributed her late husband's spectacles. Another brought in her deceased mate's wooden leg.

With this information about its information desk nicely disposed of, the District Red Cross revealed yesterday that garments made by local women are being distributed to needy and grateful civilians in North Africa and England, and announced a new series of home nursing classes.

Designed to train women to cope with illnesses in their own households, one of the courses, for residents of Northeast Washington, will begin May 4 at 1 p. m. in the Blow School, Nineteenth Street and Benning Road, and continue each Tuesday and Thursday thereafter, from 1 to 3 p. m., for a six-week period.

Additional Courses

Four other classes will be held at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Three will begin tomorrow, one at 10 a. m., the second at 1 p. m. and the third at 7:30 p. m. Each class will run for two hours each Wednesday and Friday. The fourth class will begin next Monday at 1 p. m. and continue each Monday and Wednesday. Registration for all classes takes place at the opening sessions.

Enlisted WAVES May Qualify For Promotion to Officers

"Ripples"—enlisted women in the WAVES to you landlubbers—now may apply for a transfer to officer status after six months' service in the ranks, under a new system announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

Applicants must be recommended by their commanding officers and will be sent to the Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School at Northampton, Mass., before being commissioned, the Bureau of Naval Personnel directed.

In general, women who apply for officer training must meet the educational requirements as those who enrolled originally enrolled in the officer class—a college degree or two years of college plus two years of business experience. In addition, however, a commission is also feasible for women whose superior ability is such that their commanding officers feel justified in waiving the educational requirement.

The choice will be made on the basis of general bearing, executive ability and leadership qualities. The Bureau of Naval Personnel will make the final selection.

Work Project Increase Urged For Children

Confronted with earlier maturing youth, a stepped-up tempo of living, and curtailed staffs in youth serving organizations, settlement workers should increase work projects, Clyde E. Murray, president of the National Federation of Settlements, told Washington social workers yesterday at Christ Child Settlement, 608 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast.

Emphasis must be placed upon programs for 6-to-14-year-olds whose parents are going to defense jobs, leaving them to their own devices, he said. Young people should be gotten onto farms to work under supervision, and settlement workers should supplement school physical programs by psychologically preparing boys for Army life.

I discovered an amazing way to New STRENGTH.. better LOOKS!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach
2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome
Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion

Getting value out of the food you eat is your No. 1 health problem whether you eat 500 or 2,000 pounds yearly.

To do this, scientists say, you must have an adequate supply of natural stomach digestive juices and rich, red-blood must be present.

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

Undigested food sours, causes gas . . . bloating . . . fails to supply the necessary body energy . . . tissue repair . . . often resulting in nervousness and loss of energy.

So with ample stomach digestive juices PLUS rich, red-blood you should enjoy that sense of well being which denotes physical fitness . . . mental alertness!

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need as it is especially designed to promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach and to build-up blood strength when deficient.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

Food Poisoning

For the second time within a six-month period large numbers of persons have been made ill by food eaten in the Pentagon Building. It may be mere coincidence that catastrophe has struck twice in the same spot. However, there is nothing accidental about the increasing frequency of cases of food poisoning. They are the inevitable result of the haste and hurry of wartime. Sometimes the cause of trouble lies close at hand—lack of cleanliness in food preparation or utilization of supplies held too long. Often it is the result of delays in handling, a breakdown of standards of quality, etc., for which the food purveyor cannot be held responsible. Nevertheless the disturbances of wartime are no excuse for laxity in the inspection or preparation of food. Every case of mass food poisoning should be thoroughly investigated and responsibility placed where it belongs, whenever that is possible. Incidentally, the results of the inquiry into the first case of mass food poisoning in the Pentagon Building have not yet been divulged.

When cases of food poisoning are traceable to individual carelessness or violation of sanitary regulations, publication of the findings have a salutary disciplinary effect. Even if no single individual can be held responsible for serving spoiled food, the immediate source of the trouble can usually be ascertained. In the present instance, cream pie, a beneficent harborer of deadly germs, is the prime suspect. But the Pentagon menu featured a variety of foods that have a well-earned reputation as deadly germ carriers. With summer approaching, cases of food spoilage and contamination are certain to increase. The public can do a great deal to minimize the dangers of poisoning from such causes by careful selection of foods. In congested areas, such as Washington, it is also advisable for those who live at home to avoid public eating places. In that way they can relieve the strain upon the city's limited restaurant facilities and minimize the danger of food contamination from haste and careless handling.

Congress Or Club?

The general counsel for Representative Cox's Committee, Eugene L. Garey, has attempted to justify the high-handed fishing expedition into the private financial affairs of the Federal Communications commissioners on the ground that the Communications Act provided that no member of the FFC shall be financially interested in any phase of the communications industry. The personal questions posed to the commissioners, he contends, were "designed to elicit information in respect to whether you have violated any of these provisions of law." Why, then, do they cover a period extending back to 1937, when some of the commissioners, including the chairman, were appointed much more recently?

The fact remains that the implications of this inquiry, in the absence of any evidence of guilt, are highly offensive. This was properly the attitude of Commissioner Clifford Durr. He was named to the FCC only in 1941. And he had the intestinal fortitude to decline to answer questions so obviously malicious and impertinent. The history of this attempted persecution needs recital for the benefit of Congress. The FCC had the temerity, or the misguided zeal, to inquire into the acceptance of a $2500 fee by Representative Cox who, despite membership in the National Legislature, saw fit to represent a Georgia radio station in its application for a broadcasting license. This would be a violation of Section 113 of the Criminal Code.

Now Representative Cox happens to be a popular and influential member of the Cloakroom Club. Naturally his fraternity brothers resented this reflection on the propriety of his behavior. They manifested their own high sense of propriety by putting Mr. Cox in the chairmanship of a committee to investigate the FCC. Mr. Cox promptly demonstrated that his own sense of propriety was not such as to forbid his making use of this committee to implement his personal vindictiveness against the FCC commissioners. He demanded of the commissioners indiscriminately a detailed accounting of all their personal financial and business affairs since 1937.

The fraternal devotion among Congressmen which makes possible this sort of persecution may seem to them very touching and beautiful. But to the American people it is likely to seem nothing less than a conspiratorial use of public office for private ends. These are ends, moreover, which reflect little credit upon the men who further them. The House of Representatives, by lending its authority and position to such practices, is in danger of becoming known as a political club instead of a national legislature.

Hitler And The Jap

Nothing since Pearl Harbor—and perhaps not even that great infamy itself—has aroused quite as much bitterness and fury in the United States as the bestial murder of the American airmen by the Japanese. The repercussions already have been tremendous, some of them inspiring, like the upward spurt of war bond subscriptions; some of them rather disconcerting, like the demand for immediate vengeance, that is, for an immediate Pacific offensive, however detrimental it might be to operations in the European theater.

This cry for an offensive against Japan, natural enough under the circumstances, is, nevertheless, as it seems to us, playing the game of the Axis. It is asking us to divert our power at a time when nothing short of such a diversion can save Hitler. The impossibility of waging full-scale offensive war simultaneously in both theaters should be obvious to everyone. Such a course might have been possible—though the point is debatable—if there had never been a Pearl Harbor. (That there should never have been a Pearl Harbor is another quite different point which needs no argument.) But by December 8, 1941, the most shameful defeat in our history was an accomplished fact which no amount of bewailing all the bravely spilt blood could alter. On that day, December 8, those responsible for the military policy of the United States were confronted with a clear-cut choice: whether to fight Germany first and Japan second or Japan first and Germany second. That it would not be an easy choice was as well understood in Berlin and Tokyo as here in Washington.

The decision was made to fight Germany first. How and where it was reached we do not know, but very probably the war policy and the general strategy were crystallized in Mr. Winston Churchill's visit to the White House during the Christmas holidays of 1941. There are some military critics, such as Maj. Malcolm Wheeler Nicholson, who consider this policy to have been a mistake. The general argument is that Hitler had even then so far overextended himself in Europe that he could be "contained," whereas Japan, potentially the more formidable enemy, should never have been given time to consolidate herself in the islands and mainlands of the South Pacific. Other critics hold that the rapid fall of Hongkong, Malaya, Singapore, Java and Burma deprived us of any bases from which a counteroffensive against Japan could have been successfully launched, even when American industry had made means of such an offensive available. How far this question of bases entered into the original decision we do not know, but MacArthur's brave Army in the Philippines was left to its fate, and the whole effort in the Pacific seems to have gone unto the bolstering of the Australian defenses.

The American war supplies to Russia, American technical assistance to the British in the Middle East and the plan of the North African invasion followed logically from the decisions taken here in Washington in the midwinter of 1941-42. If any of these undertakings played any important part in preventing the military junction of Germany and Japan the following summer, the strategy of subordinating the Pacific to the European theater is already vindicated. Had such a junction been accomplished, the war would have been indefinitely prolonged so that the victory, when and if it came, would have been so costly as to have been virtually empty.

Moreover, the strategy of defeating Hitler first was solemnly confirmed at the Casablanca conference. There it took the form of a promise to the people of the occupied countries of Europe that there will be no peace until they have been rescued and their sufferings avenged. Day by day that promise grows nearer to fulfillment. The one desperate hope of the Nazis now lies in the possibility of diverting or dividing their enemies. Thus, regardless of whether our strategy was in the first place well or ill conceived, to alter it now at the very threshold of victory in Europe would be the most egregious folly.

But, indeed, the most plausible criticism of our strategy is not that it has favored one theater over another, but that it has already diffused our power into too many theaters. An offensive war conducted over wide spaces of ocean against Japan, with Germany still unconquered, would be even more of a peripheral war than the war we have been waging against Hitler. We must bide our time and strike Japan with all that we have—strike not at her extremities, but strike, as Doolittle and his men struck, at her heart and center.

Open Secrets

Mr. Hoover, it seems to us, has added a fitting postscript to all the pother about the Hot Springs parley on food. He simply says there are no secrets about the food situation in any country in the world. "We are," he said, "able to keep perfectly well informed as to the food situation in the Axis and occupied countries from their newspapers and other information." And, as he further explained, the Axis nations can learn all about our food situation by reading our newspapers and official Government reports. So, if there is any justification whatever for secrecy at the United Nations food conference, it must be on other grounds than fear of disclosing information of value to the enemy.

The decision to exclude the press from the conference precincts has served one good purpose: it has aroused public interest in a gathering that probably would have been regarded with comparative indifference by most Americans had free and open discussion been encouraged. The fact is that this preliminary conference on international food problems can only be exploratory. It is much too soon to reach any definite agreements on postwar handling of world food problems by the United Nations. Furthermore, if and when such agreements are reached, they cannot be carried out without the consent of the American people.

Mr. Hoover drove home that point very effectively. It provides another strong argument for informing the people through the press about the food problems that will confront the world after the war. Secrecy now means much harder work later on in securing public support for rehabilitation programs requiring cooperation with other nations.

Air World

The polls which have been taken of late on the desirability or otherwise of cooperating with the world in insuring the common security proceed on the assumption that we shall have freedom of choice. It is extremely likely, on the contrary, that there will be no option, unless we wish to go into a state of perpetual conflict. For this state of things the airplane is primarily responsible. It will be physically impossible to assert the sovereignty of national skies in the era which is about to open. This conclusion, which we advanced in the recent discussion on air freedom as opposed to air sovereignty, is elaborated in a new Public Affairs pamphlet by Waldemar Kaempffert, the well known popularizer of science.

Mr. Kaempffert says that the first giant planes to appear after the war will probably have a ceiling no greater than the C 54's 35,000 feet—a ceiling which barely lies in the lower stratosphere in some latitudes and which is attained with supercharging. After that will come the true stratosphere plane. Mr. Kaempffert writes about the prospect as follows: "It will have a scaled cabin within which the pressure will be that which prevails at 10,000 feet. The purity of its air will be maintained by oxygen regulators. It will climb at the rate of 4 miles a minute out of sight of ocean and land. It will be an ordinary event to breakfast in New York and lunch in Southampton or Portsmouth." Mr. Kaempffert concludes that the whole concept of sovereignty, especially sovereignty in the air, must change. "Isolation," in the sense of an insistence on old-fashioned sovereignty, "and the airplane cannot go together." In other words, science is making the stratosphere, if not the air itself, free to all.

Yet, in spite of this tomorrow of aviation, the political corollary is slow of acceptance. The desire for the old political status and independence insured by the development of individual security is reported in countries either under the enemy heel or threatened with it. Our own version has its champions in Congress. The Senate recently has been polled on the Ball resolution, and 32 members decided against any present commitment in behalf of a policy of world policing of our new world. Probably they dubbed the project idealistic. Yet of all proposals the Ball scheme corresponds closest to the realities of our world. The more the relation of air power to permanent peace is studied, the more it becomes obvious that air traffic must be placed under a single international authority and that peace must be preserved with the aid of an international air force. Major de Seversky has made the point that a relatively small fleet of long-range bombers would be enough to curb aggressors. Probably, adds Mr. Kaempffert, 10 or 15 bomber stations strategically located around the Arctic Circle and other regions would be enough.

Men's minds have always suffered from a time-lag behind the dynamic changes in our environment. Shall we be equally lethargic after the great travail which in the final analysis was due to that time-lag?

Russian Communism

A Communication

WITH THE thought of the world turning increasingly to a permanent and enduring peace when this war is over, one definite conclusion emerges from the cloud of suggestions.

One thing is as certain today as it was in 1918 and that is this world cannot be reconstructed, nor can we achieve a permanent peace, without the cooperation, understanding and friendly relations of Russia. As everyone now knows, the matrix of all Hitler's propaganda today is the constant effort to terrify the world with fear of the spread of communism. It seems to me that the time has come when someone can state with authority what is communism as of today. The original Commune in Russia, or as they called it, "Zemstov," was simply the smallest administrative unit in every village throughout the old empire. Perhaps no people ever had a greater capacity for local self-government in all the little villages than did the Russians. The Commune, o Zemstov, merely represented groups of peasants and simple people pooling their interests for the common good. As I was in hundreds of these little villages during my association with the Russian armies from 1914 to '17, I can vouch for their efficiency and love of their country. During the last war, the Russian central transportation system began to break down in 1915 and by 1916 it was the peasants themselves with their little village organizations who were largely substituting for the central system. Many times I sat for hours watching hundreds and hundreds of peasants' carts, three abreast, bringing back the wounded from the front and in equal numbers they were taking out supplies to the troops. This, then, was what the Commune represented prior to '17.

American Objections

What most Americans objected to in the so-called communism was the persecution of the church; the establishment of the College of Atheism in Moscow; the loosening of family ties; the establishment of the so-called "Commissar of Immorality"; the relaxing of marriage bonds, and above all, the efforts of the so-called Third International to spread world revolution. None of these factors had any connection whatever with the original purposes, character and motives of the little village organizations, but with the breakdown of the old autocracy, these little organizations were swept into the Soviet regime and the ideas which many Americans objected to were grafted on to these villages. The local committees were, thereafter, called "Soviets" instead of "Zemstovs." The world named it communism when actually the philosophy of these individual units had nothing whatever to do with the factors which have aroused so much controversy, bitterness and hostility toward the Soviet Republics.

It now appears that most of the factors to which the world has objected have to a large extent evaporated. First, the persecution of the church has practically disappeared and all will recall that almost the first act of Stalin when the Germans invaded Russia in June, 1941, was to recall the head of the Greek Orthodox Church to Moscow to broadcast to the peasants throughout the land to pray to God to save them from the ruthless and cruel enemy who was invading Holy Russia. Almost instantly the Russians reverted to their old spiritual life and their traditions. For the last five years it appears that it has been the policy of the Moscow government to revert to monogamy and the family group as the unit of the state. As far as I know there is no longer a "Commissar of Immorality" and as we all know, the College of Atheism was closed by order of Stalin almost as soon as the Germans attacked Russia. If it still exists, the Third International with its avowed policy to spread world revolution has ceased to function, as far as we know. In any event, it is probable that the idea of world revolution was not Lenin's but that of Trotsky's who was in fact a demagogue while even those who disagreed with Lenin have never questioned his sincerity.

Suspicion Instilled

What, then, does communism, so-called, really represent today except the name? Inasmuch as the single word, "communism," is the medium by which Hitler is trying to arouse the world against Russia and instill suspicion agains our strongest ally, it seems very definitely the time to define exactly what the word means as of today rather than use it in the sense in which it might have been used 10 years ago.

Though we all know that every effort is now being made to aid Russia, the full force of our industrial production is difficult to interpret to the soldiers of Russia, who are losing hundreds of thousands of casualties, a vast portion of whose country is in the hands of an enemy who has wrecked and ruined everything he has occupied. It is so essential that we have a working understanding with the powers-that-be in Moscow and establish mutual and cooperative interpretation, one to the other, that the real purposes and objectives of Russia today should be clearly and definitely defined. Nothing is more undesirable than for us to leave the explanation of Russia's policy to Hitler, Goebbels and Goering.

Russia And Poland

By Barnet Nover

Footnotes To A Tragic Chapter

REPORTS from Moscow now say that Russia has not actually "severed" diplomatic relations with the Polish government-in-exile, as the translated text of Molotov's note of April 26 had it, but has only "suspended" these relations. And from London comes the news that as a result of strenuous Anglo-American efforts an adjustment of Polish-Russian difficulties may soon be brought about.

These reports are encouraging. It is of vital importance to all the United Nations to remain a solid phalanx in opposition to the enemy who menaces them all. Only Hitler can benefit from a break in Allied ranks.

BOTH POLAND and Russia deserve well of humanity.

Poland was the first nation to stand firm in the face of Hitler's threats and fight rather than compromise with the Nazis when the showdown came in 1939. And when Poland was overrun the Poles continued to fight wherever and whenever the opportunity to fight was vouchsafed them—in France and Norway and in the Middle East, in Egypt and Libya and the skies over Europe. And of all the conquered nations of Europe, Poland was the only one where Hitler could find no Quislings.

Russia's contributions to the common cause in the period since June 22, 1941, needs no underlining. For a year and a half the Red army was the only military force opposing the Wehrmacht. It continues today to be the greatest barrier to a Nazi victory.

Yet the ultimate triumph of the Allies will not be the result of Russia's efforts alone, great as those efforts have been, but of the combined efforts of the United Nations. The liberation of Russian soil, as the reconstitution of a free and independent Poland, will be the consequence of the common victory.

THE DISPUTE between Poland and Russia is, therefore, a dispute which concerns us all.

It would, however, be a complete misunderstanding of the issues involved to assume that the dispute had its origin in the Nazi propaganda blast concerning the missing Polish officers who, according to Dr. Goebbels' henchmen, were murdered en masse by the Russians, their bodies discovered by the Nazis at a conveniently appropriate time.

There can be no mistaking the fact that the Polish government made a cardinal blunder in seizing upon these highly suspicious charges to demand an investigation.

True, this demand was accompanied by a long list of crimes committed against the Polish people by the Nazis. The Polish government's note also emphasized that, speaking on behalf of the Polish nation, it "denies to the Germans the right to draw from a crime which they ascribe to others arguments in their own defense."

"The profoundly hypocritical indignation of German propaganda," the note went on to say, "will not succeed in concealing from the world the many cruel, repeated and still lasting crimes committed against the Polish people."

The fact remains that the Polish government's action played right into Dr. Goebbels' hands. And it also played right into the hands of the Kremlin. For signs have been multiplying for some time that Russia has been spoiling for a showdown with the Polish government.

WHEN RUSSIA entered the war the Polish government and particularly General Sikorski acted promptly in rebuilding the bridge to Russia.

On July 30, 1941, the two governments signed a mutual assistance pact. Six months later Stalin and Sikorski issued a joint declaration of friendship and mutual aid. These were realistic moves based on the premise that animosities of the past must not be allowed to stand in the way of cooperation against the common foe.

But the Russo-Polish honeymoon proved of brief duration.

ALMOST from the first General Sikorski, who took the statesmanlike position that boundary and other questions could wait until after the war, was sniped at by Polish extremists. They disliked his friendship for Russia. They accused him of a readiness to go too far in burying the hatchet. Some of these critics demonstrated that, like the Bourbons of old, they could never learn and would not forget.

The Soviet government has been anything but blameless in its attitude toward the Poles. Despite the fact that Russia had abrogated the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact of 1939, Russia refused to abandon its claims to the Polish territory it had occupied in the period following the Nazi assault on Poland. The Russian government's treatment of the Poles inside the Soviet Union has been far from exemplary. It remained very secretive regarding the fate of 8000 Polish officers who, while included in the amnesty of July, 1941, have never been accounted for. It refused to recognize the Polish citizenship, first of individuals of east Polish origin, and more recently of all Poles in Russia.

Recently there have been signs pointing to the possibility that Russia was planning to set up in Moscow a rival Polish government-in-exile, one that would be more complacent to Russia's territorial ambitions than the government in London.

If that is the Russian game it is not hard to understand why the Kremlin suddenly seized upon the Polish government's attitude in the matter of the allegedly murdered Polish officers, to accuse that government of working hand-in-glove with the Nazis, an obviously disingenuous charge, and to "sever" or at least "suspend" relations with it. For by this move Russia may hope to accomplish one of two things—either the setting up in London of a Polish government completely friendly to Russia and prepared to appease her on territorial issues, or the creation of a reactionary Polish government that would give Moscow an excuse to bring forward the rival regime it is in process of setting up.

Yet just as the winning of the war is a mutual venture, the peace, too, must be cooperatively achieved. That point must be brought home to the Polish government by its allies. We can afford to do no less at Moscow.

Community Problems

I and many of the members of the staff here at the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services have been following with great interest the articles in which Mrs. Meyer has reported on community problems she has observed on her trip over the country.

We have been able to give our regional people the benefit of her observations by circulating the reprint copies of the articles with which her office has so kindly supplied us.

These are so helpful that I have wondered if you plan eventually to issue the whole series in some bound form.

The Post is to be congratulated for calling attention to the health and welfare problems which the country is facing and to constructive measures being taken to meet them, at a time when their importance to the winning of the war and peace may be overlooked in the struggle of production and battle.

Vocational Education

During the past three decades industrial education has expanded in the United States. In the next postwar period a certain percentage of the recently established vocational training centers may aid in the extension of vocational work in the public school system.

Early adolescence is the time to acquire manual dexterity. During the 1930's many persons whose academic training was confined to liberal arts curricula had difficulty in adapting themselves to the bare demands of an industrial world. Thousands might have been self-maintaining if during high school a trade skill such as carpentry, printing, electricity, cooking or sewing had been learned.

Our Sly Enemy

It has been said that position is everything in life. This may not apply to the layout of an editorial page, but your editorial of April 23 entitled "Rat-Infested" should have been placed first rather than last.

Let us compare the subject matter of this editorial with that of the others: 1. The low state to which the people of Germany have been driven by Hitler's machinations is as nothing in the light of the devastation a recurrence of the Black Death could bring. 2. The future of New York and other overgrown urban centers "is a matter beyond the control of even Washington's bureaucracy"—a rat-carried plague can definitely settle the future of New York and other overgrown urban centers. 3. Whether or not the Vinson bill is ever passed, money, made by profiteering or otherwise, is of no earthly value in making the skin impervious to the bite of a rat-carried, disease-infested arthropod. 4. The "French problem" can never grow as "complicated and confusing" as the problem of people dying in the streets at the hand of an invisible killer. 5. Japanese barbarity may call for reprisals or strongly worded notes of protest, but against whom shall we levy reprisals and to whom shall we protest when we are subjected to the deadly torture which involves merely a small bite on the arm or the leg or the face by an enemy much smaller in stature than the Japanese?

We are more serenely asleep than we were on December 6, 1941, and the enemy waiting to attack is far more sly and ruthless than the Japs have ever been or can ever hope to be. The work of our military officers can be undone overnight by laxity on the part of our health officers.

Rationing Of Liquor

"Are you drinking for pleasure or business?"

* * * *

We may be about to see a clear-cut line drawn between essential and nonessential drinking.

* * * *

Your thirst and capacity may have no bearing on the question of cocktails in the future. It may come down entirely to a matter of coupons. We suggest the following table of point values:

1. One drink, 6 points.
2. Drinks enough to cause slightly mellow feeling, 8 points each.
3. Sufficient drinks to create the desire to organize a quartet and sing "Old Black Joe," 15 points for each drink above the first.
4. All drinks beyond stage where the customer becomes argumentative, 20 points.
5. Drinks to any patron who is known to become quarrelsome easily, 25 points.
6. Drinks to patrons with a reputation for wanting to throw arms around strangers and orate on beautiful friendships, 30 points.
7. Drinks to customers who become morose and lower the morale of the entire place, 40 points.
8. Drinks to any and all patrons who, after the initial one, keep repeating, "Listen, I'm a good fellow, understand?" when the question has not been raised by any one, surrender of ration book at once.

* * * *

We await this rationing of the cup that cheers with high expectations of considerable fun and confusion. Drinking for pleasure may have to be barred entirely for the duration. Drinking for outright sport, for false courage or just to annoy the missus can scarcely be defended in total war.

* * * *

A man who would go down to Mike's place to drown his sorrows may want to think twice about whether he is playing fair. The fellow who feels the urge to take a few snifters to register independence and personal freedom may have to consult his conscience first. And the consumer who goes out for a ball and a half every time he has a few words with the wife may face the bitter prospect of having his All Purpose Drinking Book taken away.

* * * *

Steve, make mine a small beer: I don't want any trouble with anybody.

Elmer Twitchell thinks the height of surprise is being surprised at the discovery that the Japs do uncivilized things.

Broadway Stuff

An outdoor circus is being opened in the heart of Broadway, which considers itself the center of sophistication. This department predicts that it will be a sensational success and make its promoter rich. Mazda Lane makes a pose of pretending that it has outgrown country tastes, thrown off the corny appetite and become hard-boiled and blase. But the hay is thicker in its hair than in any similar area on earth.

The Salute

I am well fed up on this attitude of criticism, during war time, of those who are called upon to serve the country in Washington while wearing the uniform. Now comes "A. D." in Monday's Post suggesting that the salute be given to what he differentiates cynically as the "bona fide soldiers" on duty here. Let "A. D." and others know that the salute is accorded, not to the individual that happens to be inside that uniform, but to the uniform itself, emblem of the armed services of the United States. Moreover, that uniformed man is rarely in Washington by his own choice. There isn't one of them, from private to general nor from sailor to admiral, who wouldn't gladly risk his life on any of the battle fronts, if given the chance. That's why they wear that uniform. I trust "A. D." would be willing to do as much.

Government Waste

Congress will be derelict in its duty if it does not move quickly to put a stop to the frightful waste in Government bureaus. Mr. Average Citizen is willing to buy bonds till it hurts for guns and planes, but he is not willing to see his bond money spent to support a lot of writers while they pour out tons and tons of booklets, circulars, etc.

Unless a stop is put to that sort of thing there will be a public revolt which will hit the Treasury hard.

Congress should limit the OWI to 200 employes and reduce the appropriation for that office by about 90 per cent.

Also, there should be no pay for overtime unless accompanied by safeguards to prevent some of the birds who loaf all day from coming back at night to pile up what they did during the day.

EFF GEE.
Vienna, Va., April 24.

Strikes

During these troublesome times it does seem that some governmental agency or some act of Congress should put an end to the strikes that are popping up in various parts of the country. It does seem high time that the slogan "Work or Fight" should be made immediately effective. Generally speaking the American people are tightening their belts and practicing self-denial and a small percentage of the population should not be immune to that need.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Russo-Polish Affair

THE solution of the Polish-Russian dispute will have to be worked out in London and in Moscow, and there is no reason to think that this is impossibly difficult. Our best contribution will be to insist that the affair be handled through ordinary diplomatic channels, and not inflated and envenomed by public appeals designed to make the United States the judge, the advocate, and the moral mentor.

LIPPMANN

Yet it is important that we should try to understand the problem. It raises the great issue on which a clarification of American policy is urgently necessary. The question of how far into the internal affairs of the European continent it is necessary and desirable for us to go. For it is just as necessary for us to understand the limits of our intervention as it is to make sure that we do not again relapse into an isolationist neglect of our vital interests. In fact the two are complementary. We can play our necessary part in the world only if we define it so clearly that we recognize the limits as well as the extent of our interest, our authority, and of our power.

IT HAS been evident for some time that Polish-Russian relations were drifting to a crisis out of which they would either become irreparably bad or much better. It was impossible to avert this crisis by the well-intentioned display of abstract principles. In fact the effect has been quite the opposite—to mislead the Polish government into taking risks it could not afford to take and to provoke the Russian government into forcing a showdown. We would have done better to have taken the unequivocal position that the boundary must be settled between Poland and Russia, that we are committed under the Atlantic Charter to the resurrection of an independent Poland but not to the restoration of a particular frontier, and that the fate of Poland, the war against Germany, the common action of the Allies in Europe and in Asia must not be hazarded upon a disputed province.

A line like that would have raised among the Polish leaders no false hopes, and encouraged no imprudent defiances and challenges. Among the Russians it would have aroused no deep and old suspicions. Almost certainly it would have tended to postpone the issue or to keep it at the level of give and take.

IN THE dispute itself there is at stake something much greater than the territory which Poland, supported by France, won by force of arms a little more than 20 years ago. The resurrection of an independent Poland is at stake, and the fundamental question is whether Poland can exist at all if she is the mortal enemy of her two great neighbors. The tragedy of the post-Versailles Poland was that she was so constituted that she pursued a policy which left her encircled only with enemies. She could not come to terms with Germany or with Russia or with Lithuania or with Czechoslovakia. It is plain that there is no future for Poland unless she develops good relations with at least one of her great neighbors. A policy which does not seek that fundamental result is just romantic suicide.

Now it must be plain to any detached observer that a relatively small and weak state on the borders of two great states cannot afford to have grave frontier disputes with both of them. Even a great state is weakened by holding border territories which contain a large alien majority. For a small state it is a fatal weakness. The security of a small state depends not upon armaments, strategic frontiers, abstract principles, or distant and tenuous guaranties, but upon making itself compact and homogeneous, and upon conducting its foreign affairs without antagonizing its great neighbors.

EXPERIENCE has shown that it is practically impossible for a government-in-exile to make compromises on any issue. The moderates are always at the mercy of the extremists because they have in mind the day of their return to the homeland. They are haunted by the fear that they will be charged with having betrayed the national interest. General Sikorski is himself a moderate man. But he is not a free man because he can not be sure that his government will not be overthrown by less moderate men if he makes any concession.

Therefore, the question which almost certainly underlies the effort to reconcile the Poles and the Russians will turn upon the constitution of the Polish government-in-exile—upon whether, while it is still in exile, it can be made strong enough to take the risks of recognizing that the disputed provinces are a subject for negotiation between Poland and Russia.

IT IS obviously of paramount importance that Poland should have a government which Russia recognizes. For otherwise nothing can be negotiated now or when the war ends, and Poland, which must have a great voice in the settlement of the German question, will have no adequate voice.

This cannot be to Russia's interest, and it is on the ground of direct self-interest, rather than of moral preachment, that the matter will have to be discussed with Stalin. It must be evident to him that Russia needs an independent and friendly Poland. He cannot conceivably want Poland within the Soviet Union. For a frontier region inhabited by thirty million rebellious Poles would be a disaster for Russia, a source of perpetual internal strife and of implacable foreign animosity. Nor can Stalin desire a helpless and decomposing Poland on his frontier, for it would inexorably become the breeding ground for a renewal of German intrigue. He must desire a decently contented Poland which can devote itself to its own internal development, and become, like the new, the smaller but greater, Turkey, a stabilizing influence in international affairs.

War Power Study Urged

Diversion Denied

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Congressional investigation of the Nation's war power program was urged on Capitol Hill yesterday in a sudden upsurge of developments involving a detailed denial by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson that American power projects suffered to provide materials for the Shipshaw power project of the Aluminum Co. of Canada, Ltd.

The investigation was pressed by three Representatives who charged that completion of the Canadian project on the Saguenay River in Quebec will enable the Aluminum Co. of Canada "to control the aluminum market after the war."

The Shipshaw controversy became public in the middle of March when Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones was charged in news columns with facilitating the financing of the aluminum company to the detriment of the American taxpayer.

Accounts of the Shipshaw project, as presented in The Post by Drew Pearson in his Washington Merry-Go-Round, also stated that the giant power plant would be beyond United States' control and will thus escape taxes.

Jones, in answer, said that he waived interest on $69,500,000 in loans and advances to the Aluminum Co. of Canada, but the interest amounted to only $2,500,000 while the company had agreed to a reduction in price of aluminum to this country which saved 16 million dollars.

Three Call for Inquiry

Representatives Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, Pittenger (Republican), of Minnesota, and Voorhis (Democrat), of California, called for creation of a special committee to undertake the inquiry in a letter to Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

The three Representatives declared that the Metals Reserves Co., subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, headed by Jones, advanced money to the Canadian company "interest free" in a series of four contracts in 1941 and 1942 for development of the Shipshaw project.

"It would be interesting to see how easily companies in this country could obtain such large advance payments on such excellent terms," they said, adding that such assistance "obviously has important implications for our own aluminum program."

Nelson Details Denial

Nelson's statement, which preceded the demand for investigation by only a few hours, was addressed to Representative Coffee in answer to a series of questions directed to the WPB chairman April 2 and April 5.

Nelson declared, "No American project has been turned down, delayed or halted to make way for Shipshaw. No materials or equipment intended for American power projects have been diverted to Shipshaw.

"In fact, most of the materials and equipment for the project were supplied by Canadian sources."

U.S. Fliers Rest Regally

Given English Estate, Butter and All

By Homer Bigart
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere in England, April 28.—A rest home, with breakfast eggs, mullioned windows, tiled baths, central heating, golfing privileges, a butler named Bunting, and fishing rights in a stream mentioned favorably by the late Izaak Walton, has been requisitioned by the Air Ministry and thrown open to tired pilots, co-pilots, navigators and bombardiers of the Eighth Air Force, United States Army.

The estate resembles a Hollywood version of the country diggings of a strictly upper-class Mrs. Miniver. It is a Tudor residence of mellowed red brick, surmounted by five squat gables, ornamented by heavily-carved woodwork. The broad terrace along the southern front slopes gently to a chain of ponds, bordered by high clumps of rhododendron. Along the west slope are hothouses enclosing peach trees, fig trees and grape arbors and the usual rock garden. The yew hedges are filled with the customary quota of cuckoos and nightingales. For security reasons, there is no babbling brook.

The estate has been a rest home since January 1, but officers have shied away until quite recently. They wouldn't go near the place except under written orders of their commanding officer.

That was because the term "rest home" had an unfortunate psychiatric connotation. It brought to mind long rows of metal beds, rocking chairs and bearded medico taping guests on the knee to check their reflexes.

Free of Discipline

Actually, there is only one flight surgeon in residence. He stays in the background as much as possible. He does not report on the behavior of his guests. They are completely free of barracks discipline.

Among today's arrivals at the estate were several officers from the bomber base that suffered heavy casualties in the Bremen raid 10 days ago. They appeared perfectly normal, but the object of the rest home is to prevent breakdowns by easing the nervous tension before it becomes unbearable. At the first sign of jitters, whole crews are ordered to "rest" for periods ranging from four days to two weeks.

First thing they did was shed their Air Force uniforms and don the slacks and sweaters provided by the American Red Cross. For the rest of the day they were free to do as they pleased. Two jeeps, a desert buggy and a reconnaissance car were at their disposal. Also any amount of fishing tackle, golf clubs, guns, bows and arrows, bicycles, a snooker table and the inevitable darts and shove ha'penny sets. The village pub was just down the hill.

Home was never like this. And it generally takes a few hours for newcomers to get over the shock of seeing a Brooklyn sergeant at work over a Queen Anne desk, worth £200 if it was worth bob. The original furnishings have been left intact and bombardiers have been known to pass the entire holiday in the green velvet chairs beside the great fireplace in Oak Hall.

There is only one regulation and it is strictly enforced. Officers are fined two shillings, six pence for talking shop. They must not discuss raids nor events at their home bases. They are also forbidden to pun during mess.

There is a complete library at their disposal and a full set of morning papers, from the conservative Times for the left-wing Daily Telegraph. Sometimes the former owner of the estate brings a rare bottle of Scotch. He lives in a trailer down the road.

Other frequent guests are Sir Harry Brittain, whose diversions are listed in "Who's Who" as "shooting, skiing and the simple life," and the local Congregational choir. One day the choir came to tea armed with hymnals and unnerved the officers by rising individually in song. "Say a little prayer," announced the village soprano when it came her turn. An absent-minded navigator plopped on his knees but covered his embarrassment by pretending to find a three-penny bit.

Run by Amherst Boys

The estate is run by a couple of Amherst boys, Capt. B. D. Morse, former manager of the Cosmopolitan Hotel in Denver, and Lieut. Royal Firman, jr., fresh from the Amherst swimming team.

"The boys relax right off the bat," said Captain Morse. "They can do anything within reason but we ask them to dress at night just to keep the Army atmosphere. Our food is strictly G. I. but Mrs. Wilson, our Scotch cook, does it in American style. The other day we had vanilla ice cream with cherries."

Bunting, the butler, gets the boys up at 8:30 a. m. by bringing a cup of tea to their rooms. The bedrooms are pine-panelled with heavy oak doors and the bathrooms are done in blue, green and primrose. Altogether, a rum show.

"The place dates from King Ethelwulf, who sired Alfred the Great," explained a bombardier who showed this correspondent around. "All that remains of Ethelwulf architecture," he added apologetically, "is the wall and window of the dining room. Florence Nightingale is reputed to have slept upstairs."

Wage-Work Failure Seen

Murray Charts Action

C. I. O. President Philip Murray yesterday charged that government agencies and Congress had made a "complete failure" of "our national economic stabilization policy," and called a special meeting of the C. I. O. Executive Board for May 14 in Cleveland to develop a course of action to meet the situation.

"A grave responsibility is thereby imposed upon the C. I. O. to mobilize its membership and the entire Nation either to carry out the directive of President Roosevelt's executive order to roll back prices to the September 15, 1942 level," Murray said, "or to make necessary wage adjustments to meet the increased cost of living and to stop and change the present policies of the administrative agencies and Congress which can only result in inviting inflation and undermining the war effort."

Other Developments

Other developments growing out of application of President Roosevelt's "hold the line order" include the following:

1. Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes was reported to have assured a delegation of management and labor representatives from western Michigan manufacturing plants that he would consider easing the order to permit adjustments of wage inequalities within a plant, but made it clear that he opposed any general easing of the order to permit the elimination of wage inequalities within an industry.

The Michigan group contended that the freezing of inequalities made effective operation of small war plants difficult.

2. WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt was expected to issue an order within two days placing the entire country under a job stabilization program which would permit job transfers in the interest of the war effort to higher pay. McNutt was expected to explain the new plan to his 12 regional directors at a meeting today.

In his call for the Cleveland meeting, Murray said Stabilization Director Prentiss Brown and Food Administrator Chester C. Davis were responsible for "repeated concessions to certain elements by further increases in prices," for the refusal of the War Labor Board to adjust wage inequalities, and for "arbitrary freezing of men to jobs without relationship to needs of war production.

"Further, these administrative agencies in seeking to hide their own failures issue arbitrary directives against labor which can only result in undermining the morale and efficiency of workers with a devastating impact upon war production," the call continued.

"Congress has also demonstrated a complete disregard for the war effort by rejecting President Roosevelt's proposal for incentive payments to farmers to increase food production, denying appropriations to the Farm Security Administration to thwart the effort of small farmers and repealing President Roosevelt's limitation upon net annual salaries, after taxes, to $25,000.

Postwar Prosperity

Commerce Department Report

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that a potential era of "unparalleled prosperity" faces the United States as soon as the war ends.

"The major potentials," it said, "will be present the day after victory is won—employment on an unprecendentedly high level, the greatest productive plant of all time, national income at a peak hardly dreamed of in prewar years, with a large volume of accumulated savings, and an unmeasured demand for goods denied to the consumer by the war's exactions."

The "big problem," the department asserted, is to prepare now to so manage these factors as to translate potentials into realities, adding that this is "primarily a job for private enterprise, aided and supported by Government."

The department's report was based on a study of "markets after the war" made by its Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The study was designed to assist marketing analysts to "set their sights on a common goal of greater postwar opportunity for American business."

Larger Labor Force

The report estimates that by 1946 there will be 10 million more persons in the labor force than there were in 1940 and that the national output will be 40 to 50 per cent greater than in 1940.

The department said a major postwar problem of industry will be to convert speedily and make peacetime goods available for the tremendous accumulation of purchasing power, the extent of which "will depend on the length of the war and on Federal fiscal policies which have not yet been determined."

"If the war should last through 1944, the total savings for three years might exceed 100 billion dollars as against a normal tendency to save no more than half that amount," it added.

"This total includes a number of items of varying importance as reservoirs of purchasing power. Included is the liquidation of consumer installment and other short-term debts which would make possible an expansion of about 10 billion dollars in such debt after the war.

Release of War Bond Money

"Many of the people who are buying war bonds because of patriotism or other compulsion will not wish to hold them until maturity. Part of the large increase in individual holdings of currency and bank deposits represent a natural tendency to carry a larger cash balance commensurate with a higher income, but much of it is money which the holder does not want to save and would like to spend if the desired goods were available.

"The amount of accumulated savings which might be spent after the war defies even approximate measurement . . . Since the production of goods and services after the war will in large part create its own market, this accumulation of purchasing power should be more than ample to assure an aggregate demand for all the goods the available manpower can produce. In fact, it suggests that the problem after the war may be to control a boom rather than prevent a depression."

5000 Lion Members in Service, International President Reports

Fifteen thousnad Lions are now serving in the armed forces, while their fellow members are throwing the fullest effort behind this Nation at war, Edward H. Paine, president of the Lion International yesterday told a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel celebrating the 21st anniversary of the charter award to the Lions Club of Washington

Speaking before more than 300 Lions and guests, Paine declared that their symbol had been a challenge to tyranny since the days of the Pharaohs. Today, he said, Lions are organized in 13 countries — "and significantly, every one of those countries is free and independent."

He urged that after the war, "when victory is ours," a monument be set up to "our boys who fight in foreign lands and on strange seas," with a lion mounted atop and these words inscribed beneath: "Peace on earth—now and forevermore."

Congratulating the Washington membership on its achievement in raising $125,000 in war bonds for the second war loan and its scrap collection drive, Paine told the cheering "birthday party," "I am glad that at least one organization in Washington has as last reached maturity."

Present as honor guests at the celebration were Lou L. Brown, district governor 22A, who was awarded an onyx trophy for membership work; John E. Banks, district governor 22B; John Russell Young, chairman of the District Board of Commissioners, and Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Metropolitan Police Department superintendent.

Delegates from 13 Lions Clubs in the vicinity of Washington joined local members in the birthday ceremonies. John M. Waters, president, presided and introduced speakers and guests.

The celebration opened with a presentation of the national colors by three marines in full-dress uniform and closed with a drawing for some 20 door prizes, most of them won by nonmembers.

South African Calls Lease-Lend Danger

Capetown, Union of South Africa, April 28 (AP).—Dr. Donges, prominent Nationalist and member of the opposition, told the House assembly yesterday "three is a strong feeling by the acceptance of Lease-Lend from the United States that the countries are placing themselves in economic bondage to America."

In reply, S. F. Waterson, South African minister of commerce and industries, said the U. S. was providing Lease-Lend to the Allies simply to win the war and was seeking nothing in return except victory.

U. S. to Drop Petrillo Action

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department has decided to drop the action it instituted against the A. F. of L. American Federation of Musicians and the union's president, James C. Petrillo, to prevent enforcement of the union ban on making recorded music.

A Justice Department official said last night the Federal Court at Chicago will be asked, probably today to dismiss a second injunction suit against the union and Petrillo.

The second suit was filed after the Chicago court dismissed the first action, ruling that the case constituted a labor dispute and that no injunction could be issued. That decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court.

Ban Denounced

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—President Neville Miller of the National Association of Broadcasters today denounced the American Federation of Musicians' ban on recordings, and declared the radio industry "wants to solve this problem once and for all now."

He contended the prohibition had cost union members "millions of dollars" they might have earned making records, and charged the stand taken by the union president, James C. Petrillo, was "political."

"The majority of his members never have and never expected to make their living in the field of music * * *," Miller asserted at the NAB's war conference. "However, they do have the votes, and to keep these votes being cast for him as president, Mr. Petrillo feels he must give them a handout. * * *

"We believe radio has * * * a great future—if it is free, but not if it lives by grace of a tribute. That's the issue. Are we going to appease, or are we willing to fight this through to the end? I believe I know the industry well enough to say that it wants to solve this problem once and for all now."

Report Made Public

Apparently to counter Petrillo's contention that the ban's purpose was to provide more work for his musicians, the NAB made public a report on a study designed to show unemployment "is today virtually non-existant" among A. F. M. members.

Touching on a point made by Miller, the NAB report said "less than one-third of the members of the American Federation of Musicians are professional musicians, practically all of the remainder being engaged in approximately 250 other professions, trades, businesses and permanent callings requiring skills and specialized training."

The report also set forth that union musicians received approximately 20 million dollars annually for radio work—a sum described as nearly equivalent to the total net earnings, after taxes, of the broadcasting industry.

Hoey to Make Run for Reynolds' Seat in Senate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senator Robert R. (Captain Bob) Reynolds, free-wheeling chairman of the Senate Military Committee and winner by a knockout over organization Democrats in his—last two senatorial campaigns, yesterday received bad news from North Carolina.

Former Gov. Clyde R. Hoey, picturesque orator, lawyer and one of the most popular figures in Tarheel politics since Civil War Gov. Zebulon Vance, announced he would try for Reynolds' seat.

It was bad news for Bob Reynolds because all of the Senator's political opposition, which includes practically every major democratic figure in the State, is expected to unite behind Hoey.

State organization Democrats saw in Hoey's candidacy their first real chance to oust Reynolds since, as a political unknown in 1932, he defeated the wealthy Cameron Morrison by the largest majority ever given a candidate for major office in a North Carolina Democratic primary.

Reynolds defeated Morrison by stumped the State in a rattletrap car during the darkest days of the depression. To North Carolina common folk he pictured the alleged lush luxury in which Morrison lived in Washington, showed pictures of his hotel as his "residence" and told of his mythical "gold spittoon."

The Senator's opponents say Reynolds' campaign style will be seriously cramped in the coming fracas, since his marriage to Evalyn Washington McLean has taken him out of the "poor boy" class and lifted him into the Morrison bracket. They doubted Hoey would go so far as to mention the Hope Diamond, but said some of his frineds might.

Wears a Cutaway

A politician of an almost forgotten school, Hoey still wears the cutaway coat and long hair of the Bryan era. He is deeply religious (a Baptist), and conducts the largest Bible class in the State. Even his opponents concede he is probably the most able orator in North Carolina. He left the Governor's chair only two years ago after an administration that grew in popularity with the pre-war business boom. While Governor and since he has probably made more speeches than any other contemporary State figure.

As Hoey doesn't like mud-slinging tactics, and Reynolds probably won't risk a repetition of his 1932 strategy, both camps looked for something of an innovation—"a dignified campaign." Friends of Reynolds said he may not even mention the name of his opponent, a strategy he followed successfully six years ago in defeating Frank Hancock.

Let Industry Build Reserves, Martin Urges

Glenn L. Martin, head of the Maryland airplane manufacturing firm bearing his name, said in an interview yesterday that unless Congress makes some provision so industry can set aside reserves, before taxes, for reconversion in peacetime operations, American industry is threatened with collapse after the war.

MARTIN

"The people," Martin said, "have been looking to a backlog of civilian needs—for cars, for refrigerators, for hundreds of other things—to take up the slack when war production ends. But the fact is that many industries have no money to reconvert to make these things; their reserves are going to the Government in taxes.

"It will be too late when the war is over for Congress to act. First of all, it takes time to get any such bill through Congress—precious time. Second, any relief then would have to take the form of giving back to industry some of the money it has paid in taxes, and that would be difficult."

Declaring that "nobody wants to make money out of reconversion," Martin suggested that money to make reconversion possible could be set up in a special account, to be used for no other purpose."

"And finally, when the job is done," he continued, "the Government could send in accountants to see how much was spent. If the whole amount was not needed, whatever was left could be paid to the Government."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Controllers Hear Olmstead

Friendly and allied nations will receive more than nine million tons of food from the United States in the next two years, Maj. Ralph W. Olmstead estimated at a meeting of the local chapter of the Controllers Institute of America in the Carlton Hotel.

Major Olmstead, deputy director of the Food Distribution Administration, pointed out that under lend-lease this country had shipped abroad more than six million tons of food in the past two years.

Ralph Heitmuller, vice president of the local control, presided at the session Tuesday night in the absence of President Harold Haydon.

Air Travel Speeded Up

A speeding up of air passenger-mail-express schedules from Washington to Chicago, California and the Pacific Northwest was announced yesterday by United Air Lines, through connections with Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, under summer schedules effective May 1.

According to K. P. Hughes, acting district traffic manager for United here, one hour would be cut from Washington-San Francisco time; one-half hour from Washington-Pacific Northwest time and a quarter hour from Washington-Chicago time. Such improvements, he said, are in line with the move to expedite essential civilian and military traffic passing between Washington and other cities all along United's coast-to-coast and Pacific Coast system.

Air Express Doubles

American Airlines, Inc. carried 1,532,812 pounds of air express and 1,908,707 pounds of air mail during March, according to Herbert Ford, traffic manager here. During March of 1942, 684,464 pounds of air express were flown and 1,096,507 pounds of mail.

For the first three months, 4,086,000 pounds of express were carried, against 1,991,911 pounds for the similar period in 1942.

Passenger traffic continued to remain slightly lower than 1942 due to the reduction of equipment. In March, American flew 33,924,440 revenue passenger miles as compared with 37,660,812 revenue passenger miles in March, 1942. This is a decrease of 9.9 per cent. The load factor for March, 1943, was 83.9 per cent as compared to 71.5 per cent for March, 1942.

Late Earnings Statements

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. reported for the March quarter net profit of $4,160,438 after provision for renegotiation and $1,505,322 for most postwar contingencies. This was equal to $1.30 a share on the 7 per cent participating preferred and common stocks. In the first quarter of 1942 the company had net profit of $4,124,654, equal to $1.28 a share on the two classes of stocks.

Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore reported net income of $1,695,600 for the first three months, equal to $1.18 a share on the common stock. The figure compared with $1,771,321 for the same period last year, equivalent to $1.24 a share.

Gulf Oil Corp. and wholly owned subsidiaries in the Western Hemisphere reported 1942 net profit, subject to renegotiation, of $22,981,562 after income taxes and a reserve of $5,000,000 for contingencies. The profit was equal to $2.53 a share and compared with $33,568,624 or $3.70 a share in the preceding year when $2,000,000 was provided for contingencies.

Commercial Solvents Corp. reported March quarter consolidated net profit of $651,629, equal to 25 cents a share, against $547,181 or 21 cents a share for the same period last year.

Western Auto Supply Co. (Missouri) reported net earnings of $209,160, or 25 cents a common share, for the 1943 first quarter, against $497,369, or 66 cents a share, in the like 1942 period.

N. J. Standard Net Slumps to $3.06 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—The Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) today reported that 1942 consolidated net earnings were $83,361,920, equal to $3.06 a share, compared with 1941 earnings of $140,572,419, or $5.51 a share.

Earnings of the parent company alone were given as $88,907,077, equal to $3.26 a share, against $84,826,764, or $3.11 a share, in 1941.

Ralph W. Gallagher, president, in his review of the year's operations, said the company's income was affected by many factors resulting from the war. He reported that unit costs were higher because of decreases in crude oil production, refinery runs and sales.

20% Drop at Refineries

The company's refineries, domestic and foreign, ran a total of 267,752,000 barrels of crude, a drop of more than 20 per cent from 1941. Domestic plant runs were 142,543,000 barrels, against 163,770,000, reflecting diversion of tankers from regular runs.

Gallagher reported that Standard's tanker fleet suffered "severe losses" by submarine action. Tanker diversions to war service necessitated shipping crude and finished products to Eastern areas by rail, Gallagher said, adding that "costs of the new methods of transportation are from five to seven times as great as for normal shipment by ocean tankers."

More Aviation Gasoline

The company reported that new processes have raised the yield of 100-octane aviation gasoline from 10 per cent of the average crude oil to 50 per cent.

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey announced today that one of its stockholders, William Floyd 2d, had notified the company he would offer a resolution at annual meeting June 1 opposing any possible future resumption of cartel relations with I. G. Farbenindustrie.

The company's statement said the Standard management would urge shareholders to reject the proposal "because of its vicious and unwarranted implications that the company's acts have been inconsistent with the national welfare."

Standard's pre-war relations with I. G. Farbenindustrie, German industrial combine, were criticized by certain stockholders, including Floyd, at the company's annual meeting last year. All patent and other agreements between Standard and the German concern were terminated some time ago.

This Morning

Baseball Fans Will Help Build a Battle Cruiser

Please read this. It's about a ball game restricted to patriots. It's about that war bond game scheduled at Griffith Stadium under the lights on the night of May 24. It's pretty important that you see that one. Because if you're there, it means you bought another war bond. That the only way you can get in.

POVICH

The Norfolk Naval Training Station team vs. the Nats is the attraction. Perhaps you don't know about that Norfolk Naval team. Well, there isn't a major league manager who would not give serious thought to swapping his club for that team of Norfolk sailors. 'Tis said of the Norfolk crew that they could win the pennant in either big league.

You'll see a ball game all wrapped up in the spirit of what this country is fighting for. You'll see ball players who were called out of $10,000-a-year jobs in the majors, representing the Norfolk Naval Base at the Navy's $50 a month. You'll have bought a swell rooting interest in one of the Navy's bigger battle wagons, because your war bond money will be helping to build the new U. S. Cruiser Norfolk.

You know about the Nats. Well, listen to what Norfolk has in the way of ball players. They've beaten the Nats once this season, incidentally. Uncle Sam holds the contracts on what may be the best team on any ball field this year. We'll get around to mentioning who they are in just a minute, but first we ought to tell you about Capt. H. A. McClure, the commanding officer of the Norfolk Station's thousands of sailors, who is very enthusiastic about his sailor team.

Captain McClure likes his ball team to win. There is no truth in the report that when they don't win, he orders court-martials for the whole gang on charges of insubordination. But his athletes know the Captain, an old sea dog with his sleeve wrapped in stripes, doesn't like to lose. If there is an order of the day on a day when there is a ball game, the Captain's order of the day may well read: "Order of the Day: Win this ball game."

When the C. O. asks his team to win a ball game, he isn't demanding anything unreasonable. It figures to win just about any game it plays. If it doesn't win, he's entitled to demand an explanation. He had to ask his Norfolk team to explain only twice last season. They played 102 games, won 98, lost two and tied two.

They say Pewee Reese, Brooklyn's great shortstop, was headed for his basic training at the Norfolk Naval Station. He didn't get there. Reese wound up at the Naval Air Base down the road a piece. It was just as well. Reese couldn't have made the Norfolk Naval Station team anyway, even if he was the National League's best shortstop. Reese couldn't break into Captain McClure's lineup because the Training Station shortstop happens to be Phil Rizzuto, of the pennant-winning Yankee teams.

Rizzuto is only half of a pretty slick double-play combination. The man playing alongside him at second base got $45,000 three years ago simply for putting his name on a contract. Connie Mack paid that much for Benny McCoy after Commissioner Landis declared McCoy a free agent. After Mack paid McCoy $45,000 he agreed to pay him $20,000 additional as two years' salary.

And so the situation around second base seems to be in good hands. You may not have heard of the first baseman. His name is Eddie Robertson. He played for the Baltimore Orioles last year. He must be a pretty good ball player. Tommy Thomas, manager of the Orioles was talking about Robertson recently.

"Cleveland bought Robertson from us for $10,000. They got him for that price because they advanced us that sum of money before the season started and we gave them the choice of our players at the end of the year. They picked Robertson. Then he went into the Navy. But I could have sold Robertson to the Yankees for $75,000 in a peace-time year," said Thomas.

One of Robertson's Baltimore teammates, Third Baseman Conway is holding down that job for the Norfolk sailors. When you move to the outfield is when you are hit in the eye by the strength of that Norfolk eam. Dominic Di Maggio is out there in center field. In the three years he was with the Red Sox, Dominic robbed more ball players of hits than any other player in the league. Out in right field is Don Padgett, erstwhile Cardinal. He bats fourth for the Norfolk sailors, just like he would bat clean-up for any big league club that owned him. And in left field is Jim Gleeson. The Cubs lost a regular outfielder when they lost Gleeson to the Navy.

The catcher? He's Vince Smith. The Pirates felt the pain when Smith joined the Navy. Smith was Bob Feller's catcher last season with the Norfolk team. "Best catcher I ever pitched to," Feller said.

Chums, they're not foisting anything on you when they invite you to see that game at Griffith Stadium on the night of May 24. It ought to be a beaut, honest.

Ewald Pyle, Nats' Rookie, Blanks Mackmen With Six Hits, 3-0

Griffs Get 5 Blows Off Christopher

Macks' Infield Betrays Hurler, Locals Get Runs On Only 1 Safety

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Mr. Ewald Pyle, a skinny, left-handed chaarcter, made his Griffith Stadium debut for the Nats yesterday, and it was a highly successful job. He shut out the Athletics, 3 to 0, as 5000 customers looked on approvingly.

Pyle held the A's to six hits, but the Nats wern't exactly nudging that nugget, as the ball players say. They made only five hits off Russ Christopher, a lengthy right-hander, but the A's otherwise didn't put up much resistance.

The Nats' three runs were nothing to brag about. They scored all three runs despite themselves. Christopher got a fine shoving around by his infield, which tossed three errors into the fourth-inning proceedings when the Nats made two runs on one hit. In the third inning, the Nats took a 1-0 lead without making a hit.

Clever Curve, Knuckler

Pyle, who had pitched six scoreless innings against the Yankees in a previous start, was running his own private shut-out streak to 15 innings yesterday. He was serving up a clever curve ball for the most part, and mixing it with a knuckler.

Pyle's shut-out didn't come easy, though. On three occasions, the Nats saved it for him with spectacular plays in the field. But he did all right for himself in the eighth. Jo-Jo White led off that inning with a three-bagger into the right-field corner. Pyle threw out the next two batters, personally, on feeble bounds hit back to the pitcher's box.

Pyle pitched himself out of a spot in the first inning after he gave up a single to Eddie Mayo and wild-pitched him to third with one out. In this situation he fanned Mackiewicz and got rid of Tyack on a pop up.

Bob Johnson saved Pyle's shut-out in the second, when two hits netted the A's nothing. When Siebert tried to score from second base on Christopher's single to left, Johnson grabbed up the ball and whirled it home with one of his copy-righted throws and Siebert was a gone cookie at the plate.

The Nats haven't got a hit yet in

Turns Back Boston With But Six Hits

Rookie Stirnweiss Is Batting Hero, Raising Average To Mark of .455

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 28.—Ernie Bonham pitched six-hit shutout ball today as the New York Yankees battered the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 0, but George (Snuffy) Stirnweiss stole the show with his batting.

The 24-year-old rookie shortstop, who was to leave for Hartford, Conn., after the game to report for an induction examination, made three of the Yankees' eight hits off Joe Dobson, scoring one run and batting in another.

His activity with the hickory raised his batting average to .455 for five games, in all of which he has hit safely—a total of 10 hits in 22 times at bat.

There was some doubt about whether or not Stirnweiss would be inducted tomorrow. He has had stomach ulcers and club officials said he was rejected in an attempt to become a naval aviation cadet during the winter. He is a bridegroom of little more than a month.

Stirnweiss shared the hitting spotlight with Nick Etten and Bill Dickey. In the fourth inning Etten tripled and Dickey brought him

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 28.—Not even Danton Walker's two million readers were ever more enthusiastic than the early crop of sports-page fans who have written in to say we're all wet in our beliefs about the six greatest sports events of the twentieth century.

CONSIDINE

Esquire, the hidebound journal, is conducting a poll among sportswriters. Our picks were the Dempsey-Firpo fight, Bobby Jones' grand slam, the 1924 World Series, Gertrude Ederle's conquest of the English Channel, the Seabiscuit-War Admiral match race and the 73-0 victory of the Bears over the Redskins.

Here are some of the counter-picks, sent in by the readers:

Barney Ain, an A. A. U. official, picks a shoulder-to-shoulder marathon race between Hannes Kohlmannen and Willie Kyronen, in 1917, which Kohlmannen won by a step; the 10 runs the 1929 Athletics scored against the Cubs, in the seventh inning, to win a World Series game, 18-8; Red Grange scoring five times in five tries against Michigan, in 1924; Ray Barbuti's victory in the 400-meter run at Amsterdam in the 1928 Olympics (only American to win a track title that time); the first million dollar fight, Dempsey vs. Carpentier, and Helen Madison creating six different A. A. U. records in a single 500-yard swim race in 1930.

Peter Keveson, New York, believes along with several others that Lou Gehrig's farewell speech at the Yankee Stadium must head his list. He adds Louis' one-round kayo of Schmeling, Babe Ruth calling his shot in the 1932 Yankee-Cubs World Series, Ruth's 60 homer feat in 1927, the hysteria caused by Brooklyn's 1941 pennant and Tommy Harmon's continuous scoring record.

John Thomas Toker, who writes us enough letters to make us believe that we've got only 1,999,999 to go before catching up to Walker, says that the class of the twentieth century was Jim Thorpe's performance in the 1912 Olympics; the Braves four straight victories over the A's in the 1914 World Series; the Dempsey-Firpo fight; the victory of the team of Brocco and Goulet in an ancient 6-day bike race at the Garden; Henry Armstrong's capture of three boxing championships, and Ruth's 60 homers in 1927.

N. C. Joseph of Lynbrook, Long Island, says it's ridiculous for the magazine to poll sportswriters, as they are biased. As a fan wholly free of prejudice he picks Joe Dimaggio's 56-game hitting streak, Babe's 60 homers, Johnny Vander Meer's two successive no-hitters, Armstrong's grip on three titles, Joe Louis' return match with Schmeling, and Grover Cleveland Alexander's strikeout of Tony Lazerri with

17,943 See Tigers Beat Browns, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 28.—Slender Tommy Bridges pitched and batted the Detroit Tigers to a 4-to-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns in their delayed American League opener at Briggs Stadium today before 17,943 spectators.

The 36-year-old Bridges, whose sixth inning single started a decisive three-run outburst off Steve Sundra, hurled four-hit ball until the eighth when Vern Stephen's two-run single spoiled his shutout. Johnny Gorsica came in to retire the last four batters.

Pinky Higgins singled home the first Detroit run in the fourth after rookie Dick Wakefield forced Ned Harris, who had singled, and moved up on an infield out.

Bridges gathered his second hit in the sixth and advanced on a

Day-Old Trade With Braves Backfires as Giants Lose, 3-2

Ryan's Homer Beats Ex-Mates in Ninth; Lombardi's Twin Killing Ends Game

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—The New York Giants traded Connie Ryan to the Boston Braves a day too soon.

The handsome young infielder had a home run in his system and he got it into today's game against his former teammates in time to deliver it with two aboard in the ninth inning and bring the Braves a 3 to 2 victory.

The Giants gave Ryan and Cather Hugh Foland yesterday for big Ernie Lombardi, the National League batting champion, and Manager Mel Ott used Lombardi as a pinchhitter today. He batted for Gus Mancuso in the ninth and hit into a double play.

Till the ninth Johnny Wittig of the Giants was leading 1-0 on the strength of a run in the second inning. Then in the Braves' last turn at bat Johnny McCarthy, also a former Giant, opened with a single and with one out, Phil Masi was safe on an error. Ryan, who had taken over second base for the Braves in the seventh, brought both home with a smash into the upper rightfield stands.

The Giants got a run back in their half of the ninth on two singles, but Lombardi's double play ended the game with credit for the victory going to Allyn Stout for three innings' work.

Priddy Takes Draft Board Preliminary

The United States of America forced a slight change in the Nats' line-up yesterday, and threatened to make it permanent for the duration. Second Baseman Gerry Priddy was called up by his New York draft board for a preliminary physical examination.

In Priddy's absence, George Myatt played second base.

Priddy holds a 3-A card. He is married, but childless thus far. A baby is expected at the Priddy household this summer, and there there is a possibility that he may be continued in a deferred status at least temporarily.

Priddy returned to Washington last night, and will rejoin the Nats' line-up today pending action on his status.

Chisox Held By Al Smith, Indians Score

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 28.—The Cleveland Indians, although outhit, made it two in a row over the Chicago White Sox today, winning 2 to 0, behind the effective pitching of Southpaw Al Smith.

The victory, combined with a defeat of the St. Louis Browns, enabled the Indians to take over undisputed second place in the American League.

Cleveland got but six hits off Bill Dietrich compared with the nine allowed by Smith. However, three of them came in the first inning when Cleveland scored its runs. Oris Hockett singled, stole second and scored on Manager Lou Boudreau's single. Boudreau also stole second and counted on Roy Cullenbine's single.

Barbara Childs, $39.40 to $2, Wins Feature Pimlico Event

Filly Scores After Hard Stretch Duel

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, April 28.—Making her first start of the year and operating in the role of a long shot, Barbara Childs carried the colors of Mrs. Merriall MacNellie to a neck victory in the Single Foot Purse, a claiming event, topping the Wednesday program. Ten thousand fans saw the thrilling finish in which J. Y. Christmas' Rough Pass necked Capt. Henry H. Hecht's Ask Aunt Ada out of second money in the field of 12 going 6 furlongs.

Ask Aunt Ada set most of the pace and appeared to have the situation well in hand turning for home. However, Jockey Danny Scocca was forced to use the favorite hard to stave early bids from Garmus and Lord Vatout.

Tired in Stretch

In the stretch, the Hecht filly tired and Barbara Childs forged to the front under Jockey Paul Keiper's urging. At this point, Rough Pass rallied and came on with a bold rush, but Barbara Childs had enough left to turn back the bid.

The winner paid $39.40 and was clocked for the three-quarters in 1:13 2/5.

A first time starter, Mrs. H. D Massey's Which Ace, turned out to be a real speed-merchant as he outfooted his eleven rivals the entire trip to score by some four lengths in the first race and return his backers a fat $64.30 mutuel. As if this wasn't enough for the so-called "stabbers," Anizgoce, representing the Edmar Farm lasted by a nose to be second over Free Dutch and return a place price of $261.60, the longest place mutuel seen in Maryland in a long time.

Willie Balzaretti, hustled the son of Chase Ace to the fore in the opening strides and then had only to guide the youngster as he turned in the time of 0:55 for the abbreviated distance. The track was in a fast condition. The best race of the afternoon was the fifth, where sprinters of the claiming variety were asked to go three-quarters of a mile.

Those who coupled Which Ace with W. W. Snyder's Red Chip, winner of the second event, collected a $339 daily double.

Armstrong, Turiello In Rough-House Drills

Manager Weill gives Saverio Turiello some advice

RIVALS, Fighting Tomorow Night, Slug Sparing Partners in Workouts

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

If "Hammering Henry" Armstrong and Saverio Turiello fight tomorrow night in their 10-rounder at Uline Arena with anything like the enthusiasm they put into their final hard training licks yesterday (and it seems as though they will), somebody's going to windup emulating an icicle.

Saverio, flashing through four rounds of boxing with Tiger Nelson, his Negro spar mate, battered the Tiger around like a kitten and, as a climax, cut loose with a terrific right that landed flush on Nelson's mouth, severely gashing the lip and bringing the blood in copious quantities.

Not to be outdone, Armstrong put on the gloves with Washington's Lew Hanbury and immediately landed a hard right that brought a stream pouring from Lew's nose. The local boy gamely came back and gave a good account of himself, boxing a second round with "The Hammer" despite his first round bump. Terry Gibson, Armstrong's protege, also went two rounds with the former triple-title holder.

Light Work Today

Both Saverio and "The Hammer" finished off with their usual sessions with the light and heavy bags and shadow-boxing, each going at full clip for 10 rounds in all. In their last public workout today, which, incidentally, is free, neither will box but will confine themselves to shadow-boxing, rope skipping and general loosening up exercises. Tomorrow, neither will do anything until fight time.

Indications point to one of the largest indoor crowds in local indoor boxing history for the fuss, which, from comparison of the onrushing styles of both Armstrong and Turiello, figures to develop into a knock-down, drag out affair.

Already over $8000 in cash and reservations is in the till. Reservations will be held until 10 a. m. tonight at Uline Arena box office. It may be a sell out, which would be the eighteenth in 19 fights since "the Hammer" started his comeback.

One of the few who expect Turiello to upset "Li'l Perpetual Motion" is wily Al (Weskit) Weill, manager of Saverio and who was also pilot of Lou Ambers when the Herkimer Flash regained his lightweight title from the poetically inclined Henry. Weill insists he has solved Armstrong's style and has the antidote to check it. He thinks Turiello will do it.

Weill claims Turiello took the fight with Armstrong on the Coast recently with only eight days' notice, of which four were spent traveling from New York. Turiello was kayoed in the fourth after a slam-bang battle in which they stood toe-to-toe and slugged it out, according to reports from the wire services.

This time, Weill insists, it will be a different story and he's pulling for an upset. But "The Hammer" is eyeing a return bout with Beau Jack in New York on June 11 which bids fair to attract a $200,000 gate. So maybe "The Hammer" will play a little anvil chorus of his own with that shot staring him in the face.

In his semifinal Terry Gibson, Pacific Coast welterweight and Armstrong's stablemate, faces Billy White of Baltimore. Other bouts offer Ossie Harris vs. Lee Rosan, welterweights; Ham Willoughby vs. Jimmy McAllister, featherweights, and Ray Brown vs. Charley Bennett, lightweights.

Mrs. L. G. Pray Wins Keefer Cup Golf by 5-Stroke Margin

1940 Champ Posts 161 Net Total

Winner Scores 87-86, Minus 12 Handicap; Mrs. Wise, Halfway Leader, Takes 5th

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Lloyd G. Pray of Manor and Columbia Country Clubs, completed 36 holes of play at Chevy Chase without a three-putt green yesterday and that tells the story of her success in the Keefer Cup tournament which the former Manor Club champion won for a second time. Mrs. Pray had 87-86, minus a six-shot handicap each day for net 161.

Mrs. Pray started the second day's play with Mrs. W. H. Wise, the first round leader, and took a three-stroke lead on the first hole as Mrs. Wise required four strokes to reach the green and then took five putts for a ruinous nine. Mrs. Wise followed up with a four-putt green on the second hole and finally finished the first nine with a 55 which left her out of the running, despite a nice comeback on the return trip for a 43.

Second Two-time Champ

Mrs. Pray, who won the Keefer Cup in 940 after a play off with Mrs. Ellen Kincaid Harris, became the second two-time champion in the 12-year history of the cup. Mrs. Alma Von Steinner scored a repeat in the first two years of competition.

Mrs. Harold L. Price, who finished in second place and led the Kenwood Club delegation to five of the eight prizes, was five shots back of Mrs. Pray with rounds of 94 and 96, minus a 12 handicap each round for 166. Mrs. Price played consistent golf on eight holes of each nine yesterday but on the seventh and fourteenth holes she was in traps, rough, ditches and even whiffed a shot to run up nine strokes on each hole and blast her chances.

Mrs. Pray's score took both low net and gross honors but as she was eligible for only one prize the Manorite took the cup and left low gross to Mrs. Betty P. Meckleu, Kenwood, who knocked a niblic shot into the cup on the enghteenth hole for an 89 for the day and a gross count of 92, 89—181. Mrs. Meckley also saved two or three strokes Tuesday by blasting into the cup from a trap on the third hole.

Mrs. F. W. Evans, Kenwood, continued consistent shotmaking with 94—9—85, which added to a net 844 in the first round was good for third low net. Mrs. W. L. Weible, president of the District Women's Golf Association, entered the prize list with fourth low net, rounds of 102 and 104 minus an 18-hole handicap each time for a 170 net.

Mrs. Wise, whose 98 was 11 strokes higher than the 87 which led the first round, came in for fifth low net with a net of 171, deducting a 7 handicap each round. Mrs. F. G. Awalt, Congressional golfer, who was playing her second round since Thanksgiving, duplicated her odd scoring of Tuesday when she required 55 strokes on the front nine and again came back in 44, 11 strokes less, for a 99 and a 172 net.

Mrs. J. C. White Wins

The host club golf committee chairman, Mrs. J. C. White, completed the prize winners with a 174 net, winning over Mrs. John Ives of Washington Golf and Country Club, after they tied in scoring, and also by matching cards, but Mrs. Ives was not on hand for the necessary playoff.

Mrs. Pray, who won a three-day medal tournament at Miami C. C. and several one day events during a winter in Florida, played careful golf throughout the two days of the tournament and by far the most consistently good golf of the field. The Chevy Chase greens were perfect but lightning fast and Mrs. Pray's feat of no three-putt greens was a tribute to an accurate touch. The winner's longest putt of the day was a 7-footer for a birdie deuce on the tenth hole, but all her long putts were close and safe.

the inning in which they won the ball game—the third. They didn't knock the ball out of the infield. Christopher walked Clary with one out, and then wild-pitched him to third. He scored on Gene Moore's grounder to Suder.

The only hit in the Nats' two-run fourth inning was a tap by Sullivan that rolled all of 14 feet from the plate. Siebert put Mickey Vernon on base by butchering his soft grounder, and with two out, Jake Early was safe on Shortstop Hall's fumble. Then Sullivan dribbled the ball toward the box. Christopher, with an easier play at the plate facing him, chose to throw to first and home came two runs when the pitcher chucked the ball past Siebert. Sullivan was credited with a hit.

Pyle was in the debt of Mickey Vernon and Johnny Sullivan when he held the A's scoreless in the third inning after White led off with a double to left and was sacrificed to third. Vernon galloped into the right field area way for a one-hand grab of Mackie's wind-blown foul, holding White on third, and Sullivan leaped 4 feet to spear Tyack's line drive for the third out.

Pyle was pretty potent in both the seventh and the eighth. Suder led off the seventh with a double and got no farther, and White languished on third in the eighth after busting his triple into right field with none out. In the ninth, after Pyle walked Siebert, Myatt grabbed Suder's line drive and routed it back to first for a double play.

Army Blanks Georgetown Nine, 10 to 0

Special Dispatch to The Post

West Point, N. Y., April 28.—Army shut out Georgetown 10 to 0 in a cold weather game played on Doubleday Field today. The Cadets fell upon Joe Wells, the Hoya pitcher and pounded out nine hits, three of them for extra bases. Jack Hennessey's home run came with the bases loaded in the eighth. Brilliant fielding by the Cadet infield, notably Josey's stop and throw of a hot one off Gilroy's bat in the sixth killed several Georgetown potential rallies.

Dodgers Edge Phillies, 4-3, In 10 Innings

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 28.—It took 10 innings for the Brooklyn Dodgers to beat the Phillies today, 4 to 3, and it was an unearned run that finally decided a comedy of errors.

The two clubs made a total of nine miscues on top of the seven they committed yesterday in the opening game of the series.

Today's skirmish was a scoreless bout between Ed Head of the Dodgers and Rookie Al Gerheauser for five frames, then Brooklyn pushed in front with single runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings. The Phils broke through for a run in the seventh, and in the eighth Schoolboy Rowe hit a pinch double for two runs to tie the score.

In the tenth a single, an error and an intentional walk loaded the bases for the Dodgers with one out and Alex Kampouris scored on a force play.

Reds Bombard Rookie, Beat Pirates, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 28.—The pesky Cincinnati Reds spoiled Wally Herbert's first major league pitching asignment today, jumping on the big southpaw for three runs in the fourth to take the second game of their series with the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 1.

The Reds put together singles by Eddie Miller, Frank McCormick and Ray Mueller, and a walk, for their tallies. The Bucs loaded the sacks in the sixth and squeezed in their run when Bob Elliott hit into a double play.

New Champs Crowned at 14th & W Sts.

citizen, wearing a red mask and a cerise negligee, who called himself the Red Czar, won the two-man team wrestling championship of Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest last night, defeating Dick Lever and Eddie Pope, two out of three falls, in the titular match before 1200 fans at Turner's Arena.

Promoter Joe Turner staged another of his auspicious "firsts" in sponsoring the tourney, and he presented Tony Galento in the role of guest referee as a piece de resistance.

The "champs" captured the initial fall in 13 minutes when Sharkey pinned Pope. They scored a second time in five minutes, both pinning Lever after tossing Pope to the crowd.

Galento's appearance was in a semifinal spot between the teams of Gearge Macrisostas-Jim Stefano and Pope and Lever. The beer-keg-with-feet took delight in mildly chastising Stefano every time that fellow uncorked a pet hold.

Stefano, by the way, tossed this match away by antogonizing his partner, who quit cold and let the titlists beat Jim's ears off.

Card Errors Costly, Cubs Triumph, 4 to 0

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 28.—The Cardinals displayed anything but World Championship form today, as the Chicago Cubs, taking advantage of four errors, whitewashed St. Louis, 4 to 0, on the senve-hit twirling of Hiram Bithorn.

Faulty play by the champions gave the aggressive Cubs a pair of unearned counters in the first inning.

Stan Hack and Ed Stanky started the game with successive singles and Harry Walker fumbled the latter blow, allowing the runners to advance to third and second.

Bill Nicholson batted in Hack, Stanky advancing. Dominic Dallessandro walked. Here the Cubs attempted a double steal and the Cards again came up with an error, this time a low throw from Walker Cooper to second, as Stanky scampered home with the second run.

D. C. Officials Study Wooden Fire Escapes

War Production Board recommendations for wooden fire escapes instead of steel, to overcome the present rooming and boarding house fire safety emergency, were cited yesterday by District Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz to Building Inspector Robert H. Lewis for consideration and possible inclusion in the pending new fire escape regulations for the duration.

The suggestions resulted from a conference between representatives of the Federal Housing Administration, the WPB and the Washington Building Congress Committee on Codes, called because "the District of Columbia faces the possibility of losing a number of rooming accommodations through condemnation for failure to comply with the District Building Code." The first result of the WPB letter, received by the Commissioners last Saturday, was to call a halt to the drive for prosecution of persons not complying with the licensing regulations.

Howard Smith of the FHA submitted sketches of the various types of wooden fire escapes "which might be utilized in the case of many typical Washington rooming houses, one of which is a row house three stories in height and approximately 20 feet wide, with a kitchen projecting at the rear of the first story." He also submitted plans for a fire escape stairway of wood protected with asbestos shingles.

S. H. Ingeberg, of the Bureau of Standards, suggested the use of a ladder, fastened to the wall with bolts and placed about ten inches out from the wall, possibly at right angles. It was pointed out, however, that such a fire escape could not be used by persons of all ages and physical conditions.

The final opinion of the conference was that an exterior, emergency means of egress from rooming or apartment houses could be made of wood, but that this shuold be recognized as a strictly temporary expedient, because of the possibility of deterioration. It also was agreed that in many cases a safer egress could be effected by proper enclosure of interior steps than by the erection of outside stairways.

D. C. Animal League Has '43 Food Pile

The Washington Animal Rescue League has enough food in cold storage to last until the end of 1943, but with the feeding of thousands of lost, strayed or sick dogs and cats at stake, efforts to keep ahead of priorities and shortages cannot be relaxed even with this backlog, John Beveridge, league manager, said yesterday.

Animals received at the rescue league are now being fed horse meat and kennel meal, Beveridge said. However, only recently he was informed that no more of the latter will be available from his present source, so he is "looking hard for a substitute."

At the annual meeting of the society yesterday at league headquarters, 71 O Street Northwest, several dozen animal lovers reelected the league's entire slate of officers. They are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, honorary president; Miss Lucretia D. Clark, president; Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson, first vice president; Mrs. L. B. Brubaker, second vice president and chairman of the house committee; Mrs. E. K. Morris, secretary; Mrs. Eugene A. Bond, financial secretary, and Mrs. J. Dann Faber, treasurer.

As the rescue league's trucks could not travel as far this year because of gasoline rationing, some 5000 fewer animals could be brought to the headquarters this year than last, the annual report showed.

This year's total was 14,003 animals received as compared with 19,000 in 1941 and with 26,000 in the even more normal year of 1940, Beveridge said.

Dr. Carroll R. Reed, first assistant superintendent of schools, who was guest speaker, said the work of the Animal Rescue League has a definite place in education today, when the schools are trying to teach youngsters now in the midst of a world at war to be kind and considerate.

How "SEED MONEY" benefits labor

HERE'S a little of the stuff that makes horse races:

We sent reprints of a couple of recent "Seed Money" advertisements to labor leaders.

Among the replies was the letter from a west coast labor leader quoted below.

While this letter disagrees with us completely and probably does not represent the ideas of most labor leaders, it does express a viewpoint that should have the careful attention of all who are genuinely interested in better living.

We believe that a healthy, competitive and constantly improved industry is the source of all good living. Here is a frank statement of an entirely different viewpoint:

"March 31, 1943

McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., Inc.
McGraw-Hill Building,
330 West 42nd Street,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We have received your letter of March 24th, together with your two pamphlets, "Where Do Wage Increases Come From?" and "Where Do Jobs Come From?" and I must say they are about as superficial a work as I have seen.

In the first place good business is not the source of good living or wealth either. All wealth comes from and is created by labor and nothing else. Even gold in the ground is valueless until labor is applied to it.

Your whole theory is based on a finished system of production for profit instead of production for use.

My only purpose in writing you concerning this is that I believe you should explore the current leading thought of the world in regard to post war planning and the broad conviction obtaining that we cannot go back to an economy built on "seed money" or any other such artificial economic mortar to reconstruct a torn world where production to effect a world of abundance for all is no longer a secret or difficult.

Very truly yours,"

(To avoid any flavor of personal controversy, we have omitted the sender's name)

▶ If you are inclined to agree with the author of this letter (many in the ranks of labor do not), then you are invited to study the two men in the picture above.

Both men are laboring . . . If laboring is the source of good living, then the coolie ought to live better than the American, because he works harder and longer.

Is it because the coolie is dumb that he cannot live as well with his home-made plow as the American with his tractor? . . . Ask the Japs how dumb that coolie is!

No, the American lives better because his labor is multiplied by efficient tools.

Since labor cannot be effective in providing better living without tools, then it certainly seems reasonable that every laboring man would want to use the best tools he could possibly get his hands on.

"Industry" exists to supply the tools that produce better living. "Business" exists to store, distribute and sell the products of tools.

The better the tools, the better the living of the men who use them.

Therefore, the laboring man ought to be in favor of the system that will improve his tools most rapidly.

Throughout the ages, men have tried every conceivable system to produce improved tools. The best way yet developed is our American one. It has many faults, but we should work to improve it, not discard it.

▶ Our American method of developing better tools for workmen has two parts. One is called "capitalism." The other is called "profit."

"Capitalism" encourages people to save, because it promises to repay anything that is loaned, and to reward the loaner.

"Profit" encourages people to think, because it gives an automatic reward to anyone who can do a job better.

Capitalism and profit get more work done in less time because they encourage and reward work. To talk of abolishing them is as ineffective as abolishing arithmetic. Their flaws are errors of operation, not of fact.

They can be made to create jobs for everybody. They can pay the war debt. They can accomplish any job within the imagination of man IF properly administered.

In the problems of the post-war world, we will need, as never before, the "take a chance" spirit which is the essence of capitalism. We will need the "I can do it better" spirit which can best be encouraged through allowing a profit.

Here is the way capitalism and profit can be made to benefit labor and produce better living:

1. Constantly improve the equipment available for the worker.
2. Use the lowered costs thus produced to
   (a) lower prices to consumers
   (b) raise wages
   (c) provide incentives for invention, leadership and investment
   (d) lay aside "Seed Money" that can be used to start over again at item 1.

"Seed Money" produces better living

▶ America has always been an inventor nation. Throughout the years, most of the profits of business have been used to buy inventions . . . better machines, more efficient factories, research for better products. We call profit that is "plowed back" into business "Seed Money." Through Seed Money, products are constantly improved, making possible lower prices and higher wages.

Did you know that this process of putting aside Seed Money has been almost entirely eliminated by our tax law?

Congress, in shutting the door on wartime profiteers, wrote the Excess Profits Law in such a manner that it also takes away most of the Seed Money of business.

Industry must have Seed Money to continue the work of making better products available at lower costs, to create more jobs and pay higher real wages. The Excess Profits Law must be changed if we are to provide Seed Money for making post-war jobs. If you think so, too, ask your Congressman to review this law and all laws—with this principle in mind:

"Industrial Progress is the Basis of all Good Living."

WPB Civilian Supply To Be Reorganized

War Production Board's Office of Civilian Supply is slated for a thorough going-over that may end up in a sweeping reorganization of all civilian war agencies dealing with domestic problems. Within the next few days WPB Chairman Donald Nelson is expected to issue an order which would create an overall "civilian policy committee" to work with Arthur Whiteside, the new civilian boss. This committee would be composed of OPA Chief Prentiss Brown, Transportation Boss Eastman, Rubber Czar Jeffers, Oil Administrator Ickes, Food Chief Chester Davis and Manpower Chief Paul McNutt, all of whom would be members of WPB.

The plans under consideration call for WPB recapturing authority over the czars. In other words, the new Office of Civilian Requirements, as it would be called, would have real authority over Ickes' oil program, Eastman's transportation agency, and the other four czars. Where the authority of the czars would stop is one of those matters that hasn't been settled. And if it's typical of controversies in war agencies, it won't be settled for months. The general plan proposes that the central office lay down policy. If the plan is carried through it'll take the edge off the Maloney bill, which would set up a separate civilian agency and which would have the effect of making a shell out of WPB. When WPB was first organized it was planned to have all the functions it's now trying to recapture. Meantime, Joseph Weiner, who nursed OCS through its lean period, is expected to resign.

OPA Chief Prentiss Brown has a new $1620 clerk in his office. She's Barbara Brown, pretty daughter of the former Senator from Michigan . . . Elmer Davis, Office of War Information chief, has asked his employes for suggestions that'll lead to economies in manpower, money and supplies. The best suggestion each month will be entered in The Post's Better Government Contest. The contest winner will get a $100 war bond; this is the last day to get your entry in to be eligible for the April award . . . Agriculture's Bureau of Plant Industry will move its remaining offices here to Beltsville by May 10. The employes are concerned because there are no cafeteria facilities at Beltsville.

War Department is searching for amateur talent among its 60,000 civilians here. Major Bowes will stage one of his famed radio shows here the night of May 20 with the outstanding amateurs. After that, the amateurs will put on show at nearby Army camps and for community events. Preliminary auditions will be held from May 3 to 8 each evening at the Interior Auditorium. On May 12 an audition show will be given in the Department Auditorium for War Department civilians. The Major Bowes show will be from Constitution Hall. The 15 final winners will be awarded $50 each.

Another Michiganer has been hired by OPA Chief Brown. He's George Seros and he'll work on the reorganization of the agency . . . OPA and WPB both have ordered the 5½-day, 48-hour work weeks in their field offices but after the Budget Bureau order they'll undoubtedly have to order their field employes back on a 6-day, 48-hour week. The approval of Congress isn't needed to change the hours of field employes but Congress isn't needed to change for employes here. . . . OPA has hired Tom Bransford away from the Civil Service Commission to handle its utilization of manpower program. Incidentally, OPA is reported to have about solved its stenographer shortage merely by reassigning stenographers who had been doing other work to doing stenography.

Budget Bureau has been studying a plan to pay employes once instead of twice a month to cut down on manpower and materials used in the payroll sections. However, if the agency recommends one payday a month, it'll be coupled with a suggestion that credit unions extend credit to employes. . . . Tuesday night at the Shoreham WPB Chairman Nelson and his vice chairmen gave a party for 150 of his top-layer officials. Nelson and Vice Chairman Charles Wilson gave the officials a pep talk. They told the officials the quickest way to get back home was to do your job and win the war. A red, white and blue plastic pin was given to all the officials and next week they'll be distributed to all the employes.

Zilpha Franklin is the new director of information at Federal Security. . . . Jim Baity, budget officer and administrative assistant at General Accounting Office, will retire on July 1. He'll be succeeded by Dudley W. Bagley, an up and coming official. . . . A special section in this newspaper Sunday will carry the names of thousands of employes who contributed to GOVERNMENT GIRL. . . . THE GOVERNMENT GIRL warplanes will be dedicated Sunday afternoon, May 9, on the Ellipse.

Jelleff Named Community Chest Head

Reilly, second vice president; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, third vice president, and Joseph D. Kaufman, fourth vice president. John F. Victory was elected secretary.

During his five years as president of the Chest, Jennings reported, eight new agencies have joined the organization, and "each successive year, without interruption, the amount raised in the campaign increased."

Dry Leader Tried For Illegal Use Of Army Uniform

Edward Page Gaston, 74, nationally prominent anti-saloon campaigner, went on trial in Municipal Court yesterday for illegally wearing the uniform of a United States Army captain and will take the stand today.

Three Government witnesses testified yesterday and Judge George D. Neilson adjourned court immediately after declining to direct a verdict of not guilty to the jury. The trial will be resumed at 10 a. m.

Gaston, who resides at 1617 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, was arrested here January 13 by FBI agents. He was accompanied to court by scores of fellow anti-saloon campaigners.

Tree-Blessed Capital Bright With Spring Show of Foliage

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

From the weeping willows waving on the edge of the Potomac to the vast Maryland acres to the northwest, shot with overtones of reddish brown buds, vivid greens, rich shadows and occasional yellow variations—the city is in bloom.

Washingtonians are among the few urban dwellers in America who, without deserting their paved pathways, can observe the changing patterns of spring.

Residents of this war-busy city, from the lowliest Government worker to the loftiest bureaucrat, have only to look from their windows to see spring in a glory unexcelled in any city in the Nation.

The traditional garb of trees in the spring customarily is assumed to be a bright yellow-green. But a tour about the city convinces the onlooker that the hillsides of Virginia from Key Bridge to the Pentagon and the gleaming expanse of nearby Maryland is an exquisite motley of reds and browns and greens, with only a suggestion of yellow in bursting buds.

The landscaping around the World War Memorial is typical of the country-within-the-city motif of the Capital's springtime. Tall dogwoods, full-blown maples, great elms chatter in the soft breezes and deep pink Judas trees capture the attention of passers-by.

On the edge of the Mall, tall Lombardy poplars like slim ladies in tight gowns provide an effective half-frame for the Washington Monument, pretending to rival its 500-foot climb to the sky.

The Potomac, ever-exuberant in the spring, is full of busy whitecaps frisking just beyond the sea wall, while motionless figures loll in the warmth of the sun and pretend to fish at the water's edge.

The breezes are more constrained among the city's buildings. The sycamores, the maples, the spruces, the oaks of Lafayette and Franklin and Meridian Hill Parks, the elms meeting to form a sun-dashed canopy across New Hampshire Avenue, all dance a slower rhythm than their lighthearted compatriots nearer the river.

In peacetime, when statisticians found spare moments to make a census of trees, it was estimated that 125,000 trees lined District streets and that perhaps a million-odd grew in its parks. In any event, they said, the local tree collection undoubtedly would stretch from here to Key West, Fla., if planted in a single row.

But statistics, too, have gone to war, and no vital figures remain to taunt the memory of nature-minded folk. Washingtonians today have only to look at and admire the finest urban trees in the Nation without envisioning them in a straight-line march up and down the eastern coastline.

Peabody Pledges Full Report On Tuberculosis Unit's Work

By Mary Spargo

Post Staff Writer

A complete public report on last year's work and the future plans of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association was pledged yesterday by Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president of the association's board of directors.

Dr. Peabody's statement followed a meeting Tuesday night of 200 association members who adopted a number of resolutions designed to wrest control from the board which is charged with following "undemocratic. vest-pocket" procedures.

Peabody revealed yesterday that he had not yet been approached by the committee. His statement in full follows:

"We await with interest a report from the five members of the committee delegated by the meeting to confer with the board of directors.

"Of course we are interested in the opinions of any group of members qualified to evaluate a tuberculosis program as represented by a voluntary agency.

"We have every intention of holding the required annual meeting and election in accordance with the association's by-laws.

"When the postponed annual meeting is held there will be a complete report made to the public on the association's past year's work and on its plans for the future.

"The National Association under whose leadership we work is advising us on a program and our own program committee with Dr. Thomas B. McKneely as chairman is now and has been developing a 1943-1944 program and budget."

The program to which Dr. Peabody referred is one of the issues in the fight which split the association's ranks wide open.

Harold H. Lund, who resigned a $6500 a year job as executive secretary a couple of weeks ago, bringing to a head a simmering fight within the association's ranks has repeatedly charged that the associaton failed to develop a program.

Rooney, 32, 4619 Highland Avenue, Bethesda, Md., which was reported here March 26, was confirmed yesterday by the War Department. A University of Maryland graduate, Rooney was cited for action in the vicinity of Kasserine Pass, Tunisia, on February 22 and 23.

Capital Aglow During Spotty Test Blackout

A trial blackout was held in Washington last night under the comparatively new regime instituted by the District Commissioners, and, according to unofficial reports, was spotty and less effective than previous ones.

The first yellow signal went on at 8:40 p. m. At 8:50 the first blue sounded, and the red at 9:10, which lasted until 9:30. The second blue came on at 9:20, and the white, or all clear at 9:35.

John Russell Young, chairman of the District Commissioners and coordinator of civilian defense, said in commenting on the blackout:

"There is still room for improvement. The lights were late in going off, especially in the Southeast section and Arlington. In Rosslyn they were very late. It indicates the public needs many more experiences to acquaint them with the new signals.

"On the first blue signal the lights went out generally, but came back on with the rad signal. I saw lights in many Government buildings.

"The control center functioned with real efficiency."

Commissioner Young witnessed the blackout from the Washington Monument with Brig. Gen. Charles Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commander of the Military District of Washington and Maj. Leonce Legendre.

An air raid warden stationed in Georgetown reported that the city appeared to have been "dimmed out" until the second blue warning sounded, then, he said, he could spot numerous individual lights.

"All during the first blue and the red signals there was definitely a glow over the city," he explained.

He had witnessed the event from a roof top in Georgetown, he said.

The failure of residents to comply with all of the rules was mainly attributed to their unfamiliarity with the new rules promulgated by the Army.

Wardens from Silver Spring reported that the only violation there was at the office of the local ration board, at 7924 Georgia Avenue Northwest, where they said all of the lights had been left burning with no one in the office.

At 9:15 p. m. at the height of the blackout, a baby girl was born to Mrs. Vivian Ahern of 2805 Thirty-third Street Southeast, in Columbia Hospital.

Lower Dock Fees Help to Reduce Fish Prices Here

The continuing abundance of fish brought into the Municipal Fish Market here since the dockage fees on the municipal wharves were reduced two weeks ago has resulted in a sharp decline in the local price of fish, J. T. Kennedy, superintendent of weights, measures and markets, reported yesterday.

The difference between this week's prices—and those last week—such as roe shad, which is now 35 cents a pound and was between 45 and 55 cents last week, and rockfish, which is 30 cents instead of 40 cents a pound—may also be attributed to the larger demand during Holy Week.

Other prices that have been lowered are buck shad, now 20 cents a pound compared to 30 and 35 cents last week and herring, which is 10 cents instead of 15 cents a pound.

Prices in D. C. Restaurants Attacked by Union Council

Complaints from the Washington Industrial Union Council to the local OPA yesterday of high prices charged in Washington restaurants brought from the local Office of Price Administration the assurance they would do all in their power to keep prices at a normal level.

The local C. I. O. offered to lend the services of its members in an effort to police the restaurant industry.

The C. I. O. also asked that ceiling prices be placed on all cost-of-living commodities and, where prices now are found to be out of line, that they be rolled back to the level of last September.

A spokesman for the local OPA said his office had received complaints from individuals on high prices and small portions served by local restaurants. The restaurant keepers are now sending copies of menus to OPA.

Asked if the office had found any indication that restaurants were buying on the black market, the spokesman said he did not know at this time.

"But," he said, "I can assure you that we are going to investigate the whole black market situation, and if restaurant keepers are buying on it, we are going to find it out and we are going to prosecute any black market operators we can find."

A meeting was held yesterday by the local office to discuss black markets in the city.

Landis Sees National Tragedy In Lack of Finances for OCD

National Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis told the District Commissioners that unless they reconsidered their action withdrawing financial support from the Civilian War Services (formerly Civilian Mobilization), a national tragedy might ensue, according to a letter released by the Commissioners yesterday.

"I trust that the Commissioners will reconsider this action, for its consequences seem to me very serious to the life of this city," Landis said. "Even the President of the United States has remarked on two occasions that the rest of the country is far ahead of Washington in its determination, spirit and faith with regard to the war.

"Unless some firm, positive action will be taken by the Commissioners to provide the residents of Washington with the opportunities they seek in playing their part in the war, this lag on the part of Washington will increase rather than decrease and that, I submit, becomes more of a national than a mere local tragedy."

The Commissioners' decision last Thursday not to submit a bill which would ask that blackout funds be utilized for the Civilian War Services was based upon a conclusion "that there would be a substantial encroachment on existing agencies dealing with most of the activities embraced within the proposed bill, for which appropriation has already been made." This announcement was made only shortly after it was stated that Commissioners would seek $75,000 for carrying on these activities.

Landis recommended four means of "making the efforts of ordinary civilians count in the waging of this war." These included an executive or planning committee, a volunteer office (he declared that the District Volunteer is on the point of dissolution), a Block Plan (which he declares also to be crumbling in Washington) and the United States Citizens Service Corps, "an institution designed to give recognition, form and an esprit de corps to that mass of volunteers that the conduct of the civilian war services requires."

He added that Washington had a responsibility for organizing these services not only as a vital war center, but as the Nation's Capital and leading example.

The Commissioners had no comment.

D. C. Man Awarded Air Medal for Feat In the Aleutians

Bonnie B. Thomas of Washington, aviation chief radioman, U.S.N. has been decorated with the Air Medal for action against the Japanese in the Aleutian Islands campaign, his wife, Mrs. Virginia Cabell Thomas, informed The Post yesterday.

Thomas, 37, enlisted in the Navy in Nashville, Tenn., on October 3, 1926, and during his servnces has been commended for assisting in the rescue of a burning boat and has received three good conduct awards.

The citation noted that "under the most severe weather conditions of high winds, snow, rain and fog, Thomas, with conscientious devotion to duty, carried out the tasks assigned to him during patrol missions and bombing attacks against Japanese ships in Kiska Harbor. His fine courage throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service."

Stanley Joins Group to Advise Government Girls

Dealers Ask 2-Cent Raise In Chickens

By Linton Burkett

Post Staff Writer

A 2 cents a pound boost in the price of chickens loomed yesterday as the result of an all-day meeting of poultrymen Tuesday at the Hotel Hamilton.

The poultrymen, from all sections of the country, organized the National Independent Poultry Council, Inc., and named Thurston Furr of Washington, representative of Hickman Co., poultry dealers, as temporary chairman. Norman Pratt of Georgetown, Del., was named temporary secretary and Buckley & Danzansky, lawyers, of Washington, were selected as counsel.

Joseph B. Danzansky, member of the law firm and spokesman for the poultrymen, said the group planned to go before the Small Business Committee of the Senate sometime next week and present a program which, if adopted, would result in:

1. Elimination of black market poultry.
2. Assurance of an adequate supply of legitimate poultry on the market.
3. Provision for a proposed industries advisory committee, with poultrymen represented, designed to act as consultants to the OPA and the Department of Agriculture on price-fixing policy.
4. Provision of an incentive profit to all handlers of poultry.
5. An increase in the retail price of poultry of 2 cents a pound, or from 46 to 48 cents.

Prices to the retailer, whether bought from the country or the city dresser, would be 40½ cents a pound. He then is allowed a mark-up of from 18 to 20 per cent.

Farmers would be paid 29½ instead of the present 28½ cents a pound. This is proposed in order to prevent diversion of birds to black markets. A ceiling would be clamped on his sale price.

The country dresser would be allowed to tack on seven cents a pound to defray his cost and make a profit.

The city dresser would pay the trucker a profit of 3 cents a pound to cover the two cents a pound shrinkage in the weight of hauled birds and allow the trucker to make one cent a pound profit.

The wholesale distributor would thus pay 36½ cents a pound when buying from a country dresser. This distributor would be permitted a mark-up of 4 cents a pound, bringing the retailer's buying price to 40½.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

When Hitler came to power in Germany, he dissolved all national women's organizations, and among the first to go was the Soroptimist Clubs. And as he advanced into countries which he now has occupied, organizations like the Soroptimists Club had to cease holding meetings, according to Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, First Secretary of the British Embassy.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Guest of honor and speaker at the Washington Soroptimist Club's luncheon meeting yesterday, she said:

"This does not mean, however, that the impulse expressed by these organizations and ideals of life for which they stand have disappeared in the occupied countries."

Miss McGeachy cited several examples of European women, who have gone to Britain in order to carry on the fight from free ground. She explained that the quality of spirit was unconquerable.

"Such spirit exists still in the occupied countries as the living force which none of the mechanical might of an army of occupation has been able to quench," she asserted. "At the moment all of the United Nations are very much concerned with making plans for restoring the means of life to the countries that have suffered under the occupation and with helping them reassert the quality of life which the Germans have tried in vain to dim."

Pointing out that the Soroptimist Club is an international organization of business and professional women, possessing contacts with trained and educated women in many different parts of the world, she said that it could play a great part in the task that lies before all of us in the future.

Expressing confidence in the future, Miss McGeachy declared: "I feel sure that we shall find, as we go forward taking liberation into Europe, that women living under occupation these long and weary months have never flagged in their faith for each other and for us; that we will, with them, be able to re-create the confidence upon which the friendly cooperation of nations will rest in the future."

Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, program chairman, introduced the speaker. Miss Mildred Clum, president, presided.

Sulgrave Club Talk

Anticipating financial distress among families of servicemen if drafting of breadwinners increases, Miss Jane Hoey, Director of the Bureau of Public Assistance of the Social Security Board, told an audience of 250 officers' wives at the Sulgrave Club Tuesday that increased allowances under the Allowance-Allotment Act, or supplementation allowances through public assistance, undoubtedly will be necessary. Miss Hoey's address was part of the informative lecture series sponsored by American Red Cross. Also speaking on yesterday's program was Samuel Rose, Chief of Contact of the Veterans Administration.

Servicemen's families, Miss Hoey said, whose Government allowances are not adequate to meet their essential needs, already are receiving supplementary public assistance in many cases. The operation of residence requirements to establish eligibility for public assistance under State laws has created a major obstacle, Miss Hoey said, because of the mobility of large sections of the population in these times. Miss Hoey called for an articulate public opinion in opposing residence requirements in the administration of assistance to those in need.

Four types of aid are administered by the Bureau of Public Assistance—aid for needy old people, for needy blind people, for dependent children, and general relief. These programs are administered by the States, but in compliance with general standards of the Social Security Board, and with 50 per cent of the funds provided by the Federal Government. Speaking of the program of assistance for dependent children, Miss Hoey said:

"I believe in day care programs for children, but I do not believe that such programs can replace the care of a mother at home."

Miss Hoey indicated that in many instances it was a greater contribution to the war effort for a mother to remain at home, even though she must accept public assistance in order to do so.

Mr. Rose told about the new provisions recently enacted into law to provide vocational rehabilitation for disabled veterans of the present war. Any service man on active duty after December 6, 1941, who receives an honorable discharge and has a disability for which a pension would be payable, may receive vocational retraining, if he needs it. He will receive monthly compensation ranging upwards from $80 according to the size of his family, during the training period, and there are no restrictions except that the length of the training course undertaken may not exceed four years, and must begin within six years after the termination of the war.

Mr. Rose, who is an expert in the field of insurance, described the unusual benefits of U. S. Government life insurance, which is available to veterans of World War I, and national service life insurance, which is available to veterans of this war. A new law passed by Congress this month has extended the time limit during which active service men may apply for national service life insurance to August 10, 1943. After that date health examinations will be required.

Mr. Rose urged that all service men receiving disability discharges make immediate claim for benefits to which they may be entitled, even though they may not need or accept payment of such benefits at the present time.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

No matter where one lives, children are certain to learn ugly, gutter sex terms eventually.

Some learn them sooner than others, because they play where there are older children. Some make more fluent use of them. Every mother blames other children, forgetting that as soon as her child begins to use such words, he, in turn, teaches them to others.

The concern all mothers feel is natural and one hopes that they will be successful in overcoming the child's show-off tendency to use words he doesn't understand.

To that end one must admit that a great fuss made over the words; the common practice of washing the mouth out with soap—to wash away the evil words—succeeds very well in impressing them upon the child and making their use the more exciting.

Instead, one must consider that any word a child adopts must have personal usefulness and significance or else it will be dropped promptly.

It seems pretty useless to tell a child of 2 or thereabouts, when he picks up and uses a "cuss" word or a sex term, that these are "bad" words. How much easier to show no emotion whatever and sustitute, right at that moment, a word that is more "socially" desirable.

When the child begins imitating older boys, or talking like his father or other adults, his emotions, are those of a small boy who dresses up in his father's trousers, or a small girl who struts around in her mother's hat or shoes. Both feel themselves to be as big as anyone around them.

They use words with the same emotion. It makes them feel grown-up. If likewise it creates a scene at home and mother and father explode with horror, then that is a double dividend. No use to say, "don't let me hear you say that terrible word again." They won't let you hear them, but they won't stop using the word. It is too thrilling an experience. The neighbors will be the ones treated to them.

To ignore a word deprives it of some of its gloss. Explain, and we hope sincerely, "We don't talk that way and people will get a wrong opinion of you if you do. That word has meanings to older children, that it hasn't to you. Here is a better term to use."

Small boys will attempt to outcuss each other when together. It's like flexing a muscle. But any parent whose use of language is good can persuade a child (not command him) to make use of words which make a better impression upon adults. Even children like to be well-thought of by everyone.

Our leaflet, "Undesirable Bribes for Good Behavior," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Dependable Astringent

One of the best astringents in the world—according to young Nancy Gates, who got it direct from her masseuse—is good old-fashioned bay rum! Nancy herself loves the scent of bay rum and insists that it gives your skin the clearest, freshest of feelings.

This line-up of spices—mustard, marjoram, nutmeg, cinnamon, cloves, paprika, celery salt, curry powder—cast their shadows for the distinctive flavor they can impart to many dishes.. Many delightful dishes with new accents can be prepared when they are used with subtlety.

Food without seasoning is like talk without reasoning. There's just as big a difference between enjoying a meal and merely eating a meal. What can supply the missing link?

Well the very thought of spices puts the stomach into a happy, receptive state. The spicy flavor, touching the palate when food is taken into the mouth, carries this receptiveness a step forward. Each dash of cinnamon, nutmeg, clove or ginger adds a bit of something worthwhile to food.

How much spice you use in dishes depends entirely upon how cultivated a taste the diners have. In the matter of seasoning there is no better rule than "season to taste." You may find that a half teaspoon of mustard added to a cream sauce is the thing, while another member of the family may like twice the amount of mustard flavor.

Overseasoning must be guarded against as well as underseasoning. The result of the seasoning should be such that persons will ask, "What HAVE you put into this dish that gives it such a delicious flavor?"

Given on this page are descriptions and the uses of the spices. Also you will find recipes for the use of some of them in flavorsome dishes. Here is a recipe for Spicy Apple Souffle, which uses cinnamon and nutmeg as the flavorings.

SPICY APPLE SOUFFLE

Combine 1/3 cup quick-cooking tapioca with ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 cups of milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water. Bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice and 1 cup grated raw apple. Cool slightly while beating 3 egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold this mixture into 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into greased baking dish. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 50 to 60 minutes, or until souffle is firm. Serve hot with cream. Serves eight.

Who cares if we don't have potatoes. Perhaps we will enjoy many other delicious dishe that we have forgotten. Why not make Spinach in Macaron Ring—a two-in-one dish which takes care of the starchy dish as well as the green vegetable? Here's a recipe for making this dish all spiced up with nutmeg and celery seeds:

SPINACH IN MACARONI RING

Wash 2 pounds of spinach thoroughly and drain. Add salt to taste, a dash of sugar and ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg. Cook until spinach is tender, about 10 minutes. Cook ½ pound macaroni in rapidly boiling salted water until tender; then drain. Melt 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, add ½ cup sliced Brazil or other nuts and stir over heat until brown. Add ½ cup butter or margarine, the macaroni, 2 teaspoons celery seeds and mix well. Arrange macaroni in a ring on a chop plate, fill with spinach and garnish with slices of hard-cooked egg.

|---|---|
| CELERY SALTMade by combining ground celery seed with salt. | Good with fish, boiled or fried eggs, potato salad, etc. Valuable in salad dressings. Particularly fine in tomato and kraut juices, in bouillon. |
| MUSTARDSmall seed, widely cultivated but imported mainly from England, Europe and the Orient. Some good varieties are now grown in the U. S. A. | Most popular U. S. Condiment. Whole—used to garnish salads, pickled meats, fish and hamburgers. Dry—also known as Mustard Flour—flavors meats, sauces and gravies. Used in white sauce for fish. Prepared—(blended with other spices and vinegar)—sandwiches and hot dogs are incomplete without it. Ham and no mustard—unthinkable. Mustard flour, mixed with water to a paste makes curative plasters. A tub of warm water plus mustard equals the "Mustard bath" so helpful in treating colds and fatigue. There are other medicinal uses for mustard. |
| CINNAMONAromatic bark of cinnamon tree. Mostly from Ceylon. | Try sticks in Ski Balls; hot, sweet, strong tea with clove-stuck lemon slices plain or spiked. Use long sticks for tall drinks. Flavors medicines, chocolate. Makes "tea." |
| NUTMEGThe kernel of a fruit also known by that name. Grown in East Indies, Netherlands, and British West Indies. | Whole—to be grated as needed. Ground—used in baked goods, sauces, puddings. Good sprinkled over certain vegetables such as cauliflower. Merges well with spinach. Topping for eggnog and custards. Sprinkle on fried bananas, on bananas and berries with cream. Use in sweet potato souffle. The best spice flavoring for doughnuts. Nutmegs are sometimes carved into charms and pins. |
| CLOVESNail-shaped flower bud of the stately clove tree. Originally found only in Netherlands East Indies. Now also grown in Madagascar and Zanzibar. | Whole—for pork (ham) roasts; pickling for fruits, spiced sweet sirups. Ground—baked goods, chocolate puddings; potato soup, borscht, stews. Stud lemon slices with cloves for tea. Pomanders: Stud oranges with cloves. Roll in mixture of equal parts powdered oris root and cinnamon. Wrap in tissue for a few weeks; shake off powder. For fragrance and moth repellant. |

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

We use the word backbone for courage and stamina and it is a good choice. When your back aches, you certainly can't put the old winning spirit into your work or play.

If your back frequently "gives out" on you, take this swayback test to tell whether you are straining it: Stand with back to wall, heels about three inches out, and pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles to try to flatten the small of your back against the wall.

With a good posture line-up, you will be able to flatten your entire back against the wall. If you can get so close to the wall that there is barely space for the flat of your hand between it and the small of your back, that is average. But if there is a gap big enough for your fist, you are away out of line. That is the reason you tire so easily and have so many backaches.

Oddly enough, the exercises which correct sway back concentrate on the muscles of the abdomen for the outcurve of the abdomen pulls the spine sharply forward.

To avoid any strain in your exercises, lie on your back on the floor, one leg straight down and the other bent, foot on floor close to hip. Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and hold while you flex the straight leg, bringing it to the chest. The aim of this exercise is not so much to bring the knee to chest as it is to keep pressing the small of the back against the floor. Straighten leg downward and repeat. Perform slowly, six times, with the same foot. Rest and perform with other leg flexed and foot on floor.

Following that, flex both knees to chest, clasp hands about knees, and rock gently back and forth. This rounds out the small of the back and helps to strengthen the abdominal muscles.

Here is a "resting" position which also rounds out the lower back: Stand on floor on knees, then sit back on your heels and bend trunk forward to rest forehead on folded hands on floor. Pull up and in with your abdominal muscles and just rest there for two to three minutes.

If you have a weak lower back, there are certain types of exercise to avoid—especially twisting movements. An exercise in which you twist sharply at the waist may do you more harm than good.

Anyone should save her back in lifting but this is particularly important when you have a weak back. Keep your back out of the lifting. Go down with one foot forward, knees bent, back straight and when you come up you can make your powerful thigh muscles do most of the work. That is a good rule even for dusting or bending to pick up small objects from the floor. When you do your Victory gardening, use knee pads and sit back on your heels—never stoop over with knees straight.

You might check up on your sleeping accommodations. A too soft bed with yielding mattress and springs let your back sag into an unnatural position. It may be that you are sleeping with your back on strain.

The Fascinator

I

My husband is a worthy man,
But lacking all romance,
While a Cleopatra I might have been
Had I but had the chance.
For men are some way drawn to me
By some weird power I possess.
They seek me out in every crowd
And their attentions on me press.

II

Take Count Casaba, refugee,
Who bows low o'er my hand.
He swears he'll kill himself some day
Because I have such self-command;
And at every party I'm sure to meet
That Irishman, Bourke, so bold.
He says that after I was made,
My maker broke the mold.

III

And then there's dear old Colonel Wheeze,
To say naught of Senator Prance—
They both insist I'm their best girl—
Are always begging me to dance.
And at a party just last week
I got quite a rush from rookies;
I heard the life of Private Zith—
I must write and send him cookies.

IV

And then my very special beau
Is Captain Martinet.
He dances well, also plays bridge.
(His family isn't here yet.)
Besides, a Mr. Rufus Sphinx
Has paid me marked attention.
I rather think he has a wife
(With whom there must be some dissension).

V

Is dear old Skiddy Tweed,
A dashing bachelor he was (Now a little gone to seed).
One who writes me lovely poetry
Is Byron Bysshe Wildwood.
The man's a genius—it's too bad
He can't earn a livelihood.

VI

An admirer of my beauty rare,
With no intentions base,
Is the portrait painter, Algy Dabb.
He says he's "haunted" by my face.
And for a decade Tony Flitt
His woes to me 's been bringing;
He nobly won't divorce his wife
Because she is so clinging.

VII

There's also handsome Roddy Sleek
And my fiery Latin, Salvatore,
Diplomats—alas, for each must wed
A rich and influential bore.
And in Monty Bilk, who lives alone,
I've truly inspired the grand passion.
He comes to dinner every night
To share with us our ration.

VIII

Now, the strangest thing about my John—
He's not the least bit jealous.
It doesn't seem to worry him
When my admirers get overzealous;
But he really has no cause for fear,
For in one thing I'm resolute—
I'd never dream of leaving him,
Despite my wooers' mad pursuit.

Flavor Carrots

The lowly carrot has come into its own, with food rationing here. Gracie Allen has a recipe for serving carrots that makes them into a brave new dish. Cook the carrots until tender and then saute in a tablespoon of butter and a tablespoon each of chopped parsley and lemon juice for each cup of carrots. Definitely a new flavor sensation for carrots!

Sandwich Spread

A meat sandwich has a bit more zip if you spread the bread with horseradish butter . . . especially if you like horseradish. Cream ¼ cup of softened butter or enriched margarine with one tablespoon horseradish and use as a spread.

Lentil Soup

Lentil soup is an old-time favorite but it tastes just as good today . . . a heartening dish, anytime. You can increase the flavor and sustenance of the soup by adding frankfurts cut into ½ inch slices when almost ready to serve. Simmer about 10 minutes after frankfurts are added. Navy bean, black or lima beans, make a mighty good soup too.

Give Beets the Harvard Accent

Buttered beets seem to hit the spot with those who are beet-eaters. But if it is no longer possible to drench the beets with butter, give them the Harvard accent. Prepare them this way:

Harvard Beets—Mix ½ cup sugar with 1½ teaspoons cornstarch, add ¼ cup vinegar and ¼ cup water. Boil 5 minutes, then add 10 cooked beets, sliced or cubed. Simmer slowly over low heat for ½ hour. Bring quickly to boiling point, then stir in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Season with salt and serve hot.

Cooked beets combine well with onion or celery. A specialty fine salad is made with 2 cups chopped cooked beets, 2 cups chopped raw cabbage and ½ cup freshly grated horseradish. Steep all ingredients in a bit of vinegar sweetened with sugar and further touched up with salt. Honey may be used in place of sugar.

Five-Year-Old Boy's 'Tough Guy' Mistreatment Of Two-Year-Old Youngster Who Trespasses Daily In His Back Yard Has Mothers at Swords' Points

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a vexatious neighborhood problem on my hands, with which I can't seem to cope. I live in a detached suburban home with a small fenced yard as a playground for my 2-year-old adopted son. However, the boy is very ingenious about getting out sometimes; and he always runs immediately into the yard next door, where my neighbor's 5-year-old adopted son has all kinds of toys lying about. Whatever toy my sons picks up is snatched roughly away by the 5-year-old, who then starts mauling the younger child. He uses his fists and scratches, too; and really hurts.

You may say: Why don't I call my little son home; and explain fair play to the other youngster? Why? Because I have had my larynx removed and can't speak. A lot of rough and hurtful pummeling can go on before I can cover the ground running to my son's rescue. We cannot afford a nursemaid; and when my child is well, he goes to a nursery school for half a day in order to escape the neighbor child's unmerciful persecution. I feel certain that my neighbor hears my son's screams and sees some of the rough stuff; but she has never yet done what I would consider the human thing, namely: call to her son to stop. I have seen her rush out front when her child yells; so I know she must be aware of what goes on and just doesn't correct her son for some obscure and unworthy reason.

This may be prompted by annoyance at me,—for having once told a maid that both little boys were adopted through the same agency. She has carried out the fiction of her son's being her own flesh and blood; whereas my reasoning counsels me to take another course. I am quite in sympathy with her pretense, and would even like to cooperate with her, now that I know her preference. But at the time I told my maid, I just did not know her attitude. She enlightened me one day shortly afterward, and since then I have never mentioned her child's background. What she chooses to do about it is her own serious problem.

But I am not supine enough,—even though my voiceless condition limits my efforts at effective interference,—to put up with this daily petty cruelty by her badly managed child. What shall I do? Should I sell my house and move? Or write a note to the man of the house next door and ask his cooperation in correcting the situation? Any helpful suggestion you can give will be greatly appreciated.

WORRIED MOTHER.

Smaller Boy's Mother Is Passing the Buck

DEAR W. M.: You speak of "daily petty cruelty" which the neighbor boy inflicts upon your 2-year-old son. Since the punishment is meted out on the neighbor's premises, under the vengefully indifferent nose of the neighbor mother, this can only mean that your son is a daily and plainly unwelcome trespasser on your neighbor's property. Thus it ill behooves you to be talking indignantly about her "badly managed child." No doubt you have heard the proverb: "People in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." Yet that is precisely what you are doing. So long as your own son is making a daily nuisance of himself in the neighbor's yard, for lack of adequate supervisory restraint on the home front, you haven't a leg to stand on in bitterly complaining about the offensive shortcomings of the neighboring mother and child. That is a case of the pot calling the kettle black.

In making this fact clear, however, I am by no means defending the other mother's boorish policy of silently condoning and thus tacitly encouraging her son's ruffian conduct,—as a means of routing your pestiferously roaming offspring and administering a bludgeon rebuke to you. For her own son's sake, she should take advantage of this early opportunity in the School of Experience to train him in the techniques and self-respecting satisfaction of dealing patiently and courteously with brashly intrusive and thoughtless individuals,—of whom he will meet many on the road of life. That is, if she wants him to grow up to be a civilized human being, with positive graces of character. And her son is certainly of an age when the seeds of reasoned self-discipline could be permanently implanted, by dint of casual, kindly and specific pointers concerning the gentlemanly importance and the "how-to-do" of large-minded and sporting behavior.

Runabout Child Needs Impersonal Safeguard

Your son is a bit too young, at the age of 2, to get the drift of that type of coaching, and so must rely upon you to arbitrarily shape the pattern of his social experiences yet awhile. But if that other mother is making a very poor showing in the parent's role, in letting her son's philosophy of behavior develop coarsely any which way, you are not doing any better in letting your adopted charge pathetically stick his little neck out in search of forbidden fruit and get his nose punched for his molesting activities, every day of the week.

The civilized solution of this "vexatious neighborhood problem," as I see it, is to bring your own child under properly protective 24-hour-a-day physical control, so that he can never again witlessly lead with his chin into pugilistic difficulties next door when your back is turned. This you can do by inclosing his playground with a fence that he cannot scale or otherwise break through, guarded by a gate that is padlocked or otherwise tight locked out of his reach and ability to open. This is not only your minimum obligation to him, and the gesture of atonement due your justifiably exasperated (even though ill-mannered) neighbor, but it is also a cheaper method, and less financially risky, than getting involved in a selling and moving transaction.

Give Him Well-Fenced, Well-Stocked Playground

And when workmen come to make the fence secure, you should prove yourself a gentlewoman by graciously getting across to the churlish Mrs. Blank the "good neighbor" explanation that you are having the job done to keep your Johnnie from continually pestering her Dick; and are sorry you hadn't got around to it sooner. In other words, head off the idea that you are building a spite fence. Then, keep Johnnie content in his yard by giving him an interesting variety of play supplies—which, at his age, should be "building" equipment and take-apart toys, in addition to a sandbox and trapeze trestle. You may obviate boredom for him by periodically changing (every few days) his movable stock—and keeping the "reserve" materials out of sight (perhaps in the basement) so that they will fire him with fresh enthusiasm when again brought to sight. By restricting any given day's assortment to a functional minimum that can be purposefully used, you not only spare him the nervous fatigue of wandering vaguely from one transiently tempting occupation to another, but you also indirectly foster the growth of productive concentration.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER XX

Ruth turned away and walked slowly back to the Calle Granada. There were many people on the street and it seemed to her that some one of them should be able to tell her where Jean had gone. But that, logic told her, was no good, either. Then as she walked along she met Steve and Tonia. They were going to the Casa Valencia.

Steve said, "Ruth, you can't worry like this. It does no good." And even Tonia looked at her without the old malice. Ruth said, "I've just been to his house. I couldn't make the housekeeper understand me. Steve, do you think he could have told her anything?"

"He wouldn't confide in her, Ruth," Steve said. "But if it will ease your worry any we'll go talk to her again."

Ruth told him she didn't want to spoil their evening, but Steve just shook his head and Tonia seemed not unwilling. They went back to the side street and got the housekeeper to the door. Steve could talk a little Spanish and he asked the colored woman a lot of questions. He got her to admit them and they went into the doctor's consultation room. It was a gloomy room with heavy, old-fashioned furniture and a bookcase filled with French medical and surgery volumes.

Steve said: "Major Hunt went all through the house. Cartier uses only this room, the waiting room, and a bedroom upstairs. He takes his meals in a little room just off the kitchen. I don't know what we could find here."

"No," Ruth admitted, "it is no use."

"Is that a map on the desk?" Tonia asked. "That paper lying there with a book on it." She stood just inside the doorway, her manner suggesting that the unattractive room was distasteful to her. "Would a doctor keep a map on his desk normally?" she asked.

Steve turned to the desk and Ruth looked over his shoulder. The book was a novel by Jules Verne. Steve read the title aloud, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." The volume fell open in his hand, and upon the page to which it opened someone had writtten in a bold hand, "Pure hokum!"

Steve looked up, his expression shocked. "Say—here's something!" he exclaimed. "This is an English edition of Jules Verne, and Carter might like to read English—but would he be contemptuous of a writer like Verne?" He looked in that shocked way from Ruth to Tonia. "I never heard the doctor use American slang. This book is about a submarine, before subs were invented. Jules Verne was a very imaginative novelist. Now, who would call such a story hocum——"

"Perhaps Burke," Tonia broke in.

"Sure. Because Burke is a submarine man. He is the sort who would criticize Jules Verne. Why, the man must have been here in this house!"

Ruth stared at him, only partially grasping the implications of this discovery. It might mean that Burke had forced his way into the house to hide; it might mean that Jean had brought him there and given him refuge. Steve hurried from the room, and the two girls could hear him speaking his bad Spanish to the colored housekeeper. When he returned he said "He was there, all right,"

"But why?" Ruth asked.

"He arrived before the doctor came home last night, then went away with Cartier. The woman didn't tell because her employer had instructed her to keep quiet. She says she knows no more than that."

"The map, Steve," Tonia urged. She was quite excited now. "It may tell us something."

Steve took up the map. It was a chart of the island, and upon it someone had marked in red ink a route from the town of San Marcos to a village named Villa Rae at the island's upper end. A red circle was drawn about the village.

Steve said, "Ruth, is this the village where Dr. Cartier goes at times?" And she replied, "I never heard the name of the village, but it must be." She looked at the map. "See? It is the only village at the upper end. How far is it?"

"About 45 miles."

"It wouldn't be much of a trip if we had a car."

"But we have a car," Tonia said, "Steve borrowed one at the base." She looked from Ruth to Steve, laughing. "This is my first adventure off the screen. It's fun. What are we waiting for?"

Steve folded the map and thrust it into his pocket. They left the house and hurried to the car parked on the Calle Granada. Steve wrote a hasty note before getting in behind the wheel, and gave it to a passing soldier to deliver. He explained as they drove away, "I want Major Hunt to know where we're going. It's best to know reinforcements are on the way in a case like this."

They drove out of San Marcos and followed the shore road. They drove past High Point, where Jean and Ruth had picnicked that day, where Jean and she had found themselves in love. Or, she suddenly wondered, were they in love? Or were they drawn together because each had loved before and lost a loved one? Steve pushed the map at her, saying, "Take a look. It looks like a tricky route."

Tonia and she bent over the map so the dash light shone upon it. Tonia said, her voice excited, "10 miles along the coast, Steve, then a turn to the left. That's where the road becomes tricky."

The road was dark and lonely, and Ruth wondered what had become of the moon. She glanced at the sky, and it was piled up with black clouds. Tonia lighted a cigarette, but both Steve and Ruth said, "No, thanks." Steve was intent on his driving, as though racing to save a man's life.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

"Partner and I disagreed over my proper rebid on this hand," writes G. R. N., "so we are submitting the hand to you for your opinion. I was sitting South, as dealer, in a rubber-bridge game and held these cards:

♠ A 10 9 4
♡ J 8 6
◇ Q 9 7
♣ A K 3

"The bidding went:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 3 ♠ | Pass |

"What do you think I should now bid after North's jump of three spades?"

After hearing North's strong response of three spades, South's bid is a shift to three no trump because of his balanced distribution. Unless his partner's hand is unbalanced, in which case North will return to spades, there will be no more tricks at a suit declaration than at no trump, which offers a cheaper chance for game, since only nine tricks are needed.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Ellen Wood's Latest Poem Is Translated in Chinese

Americans and Chinese Think Alike, Say Chinese, Educator and American Poetess

By Marie McNair

Deep-thinking Dr. Mong Shou-chun, Councilor of the Ministry of Education of China, and high-thinking Ellen Wood, poetess, are agreed. They both believe there is great similiarity between the Chinese and American way of thinking.

"The twain DO meet" they say, "but, only after the superficialities of each country have been discerped: then our mentalities can work brotherlike."

To prove this in poetry, Dr. Mong said, "Ellen Wood, your poem, 'Mercy's Plain Appeal,' could have been written by a Chinese poet. Oh, yes," he continued, "I shall prove it by translating your poem into Chinese." And forthwith he did, also sending a copy to the author. He proposes to publish "Mercy's Plain Appeal" in China.

Ellen Wood, young and gifted and serious minded, in private life is Mrs. Abrasha Robofsky. Her husband—Russian born—is a well known singer, has appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra and the Philadelphia Symphony.

Ellen Wood's latest offering from her gifted pen is an effort toward amalgamation, and also a challenge to each individual who thinks before buying a war bond or giving to the Red Cross, BUT who buys luxuries without thinking.

Must Humanism
Beg, deploy
Crowd anthems,
Substitute, devise,
Praise scantling hand
Or proclomate Appeal?

Must valor
Speculate, announce,
Append and actualize
Its rate,
Define its name,
Translate through Death, Appeal?

Must rivers leap,
Must mountains split,
Must children buy their bread
With sleep
Too late to eat
Too late to weep—
Must children die?

Must oceans greet the land
Through blood,
Must men break-breath,
Relinquish, stare,
Too late to meet
Too late to share—
For Mercy's Plain Appeal.

No prated guile's
Redundant cloth
Can cover scar of Lethargy,
Bring Peace or shorten Pity's crop,
No halfling Charity
No grudging hour
Can stoke rare Mercy's Plain Appeal.

Only, as Core and Sheath of Life
Declare and multiply the Heart,
Blend Service, Obligation seal,
Envelop Humble-Will, to GIVE,
Only, as Duty penetrates
Stenciling Pledge upon the Soul;
Shall Mercy thrive,
Through Mercy's Plain Appeal!

The author of poems and songs for children, among her lighter works, Ellen Wood is a firm believer in the necessity of poetry, particularly during wartimes. She writes and studies unceasingly. On one of her recent trips she was in Louisiana, where she heard some of the Cajun folk music, which delighted her ear. Now she's working with that music and with the Cajun folk-lore to put the two together into a ballad. The music, she found, was akin to the sing-song Chinese rhythms.

Halfway Round the World and Back Again, Officer Home for First Time in Six years

Bob Leary Home For Easter Reunion With Family

By Peggy Preston

The fortunes of war have carried young Bob Leary of the United States Coast Guard Reserve halfway around the world and back again.

Here in Washington the other day, the 23-year-old lieutenant, junior grade, was enjoying his first Easter week reunion with his family in six years. He had many an interesting tale to spin, for the tall, blond Irishman has seen action in two major theaters of war, the North Atlantic and the South Pacific. And he's all set for a go at a third.

The lieutenant, who is a seafaring man from away back, hopes his next assignment will be in the European arena. That is the one spot he missed in his journeys as a member of the Coast Guard and as first mate of the famed world-cruising schooner, the Yankee.

He can tell you almost anything you want to know about the natives, the food and the living conditions in any country, from Greenland to the Solomons. To win friends and influence your lunch basket in the last named, he recommends a working knowlede of pidgin English.

"Most of the men out there now are picking up enough knowledge of the stuff to make life a little simpler for them," he says. "Once you get the hang of it, you can make all sorts of deals with the natives. They'll trade practically anything they have for a piece of tobacco."

As per example, according to Lieutenant Leary: You big fella stop along shore," translated means, "You are a white man living on the coast." All white women are known as "Mary," and the phrase "Grass belong Mary" refers to a woman's hair.

Lieutenant Leary first went into the Solomons in 1939, when he was first mate aboard the Yankee. In many instances he and his companions were the first white men the natives had ever seen.

Natives Cooperative, He Reports

"They are quite cooperative once you gain their confidence," he explains. "But they can be difficult enemies if they decide they can't trust you. Many of them have only recently left off cannibalism, so it is best to be careful on some of the isolataed islands."

The small, dark natives of the Solomons are a highly religious and superstitious race, reports the lieutenant, who took extensive notes during his stays there and one day intends to compile a book from them.

"Their pageants are amazing," he say. "With them they tell you the entire history of their people and their island. As a matter of fact they are so clever with them that they can make you think anything they wish.

LIEUT. BOB LEARY, U. S. N.

Born in Connecticut, Lieutenant Leary (the O was dropped a few generations ago to facilitate spelling) went to sea at the age of 13. As is the case with many sailors, his mother wanted him to do summer work on a farm, but Long Island Sound was his first love. His vacations he spent as a hand on small yachts and boats and in the winters he attended Wilbraham Academy.

Received Commission In 1941

After graduation he aimed for the Coast Guard Academy and after a couple of tries at the entrance examinations, was accepted in 1933. The business of classroom sailing palled a bit on the 19-year-old and after a year at the academy he resigned to take a berth on the Yankee and begin his world travels.

In July of 1941, when war seemed imminent, he returned to the academy as a member of the Coast Guard and got his commission with his original class. Three hours after graduation he was handed sailing orders on the Campbell.

Following a tour of patrol duty along the Atlantic coast, he went with the North Atlantic Convoy Patrol and had seven months in Atlantic waters. In February of 1942, he was transferred to Honolulu and later served as navigator aboard one of the ships of the Coast Guard.

For the past few months he has been with training units in the United States . . . with some classroom work thrown in again.

But as the lieutenant explains, "There are an awful lot of things to do in this world, once you start doing them," and if his luck holds out he figures he'll see a European battleground before the war is over.

Debutante Ball Major Event Of Season in Seville, Spain

Daughter of Duke of Alba Is Presented to Society at Father's Palace

Even in peacetime a debut is good copy. But a full-fledged European debut in this day and age comes under the heading of something brand new and different.

An Associated Press dispatch, datelined Seville, Spain, gives an account of such a happening, the first great social event of such a character since Spain's Civil War. It reads as follows:

"Spain's outstanding 'deb' made her bow into Spanish society tonight (April 27) in the biggest social affair the European Continent has seen in many years.

"The Duke of Alba and Berwick, whose titles outnumber those of most of the world's kings, presented his 17-year-old daughter, Maria Del Rosario Cayetana, to about 1500 Spaniards and foreigners, including the Ambassadors of the United States and severa' South American nations, at his Sevilla palace.

"Several members of Spain's royal family attended the ball. The blond Cayetana, who will hold even more titles than her father upon his death, wore a simple blue dress contrasting sharply with the many flamenco or gypsy costumes and evening gowns."

Mrs. Griswold Christens Ship In Boston

Boston, April 28 (AP).—Mrs. Don T. Griswold, sr., of Clarinda, Iowa, was in Boston today to christen a new destroyer escort which commemorates the name of her son, a Naval flyer, who was killed in action against the Japanese during the Battle of Midway, June 6, 1942.

The vessel, which was built at the Boston Navy Yard, is named the U. S. S. Griswold after Ensign Don T. Griswold, jr., U. S. N. R., who was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his heroism in attacking an enemy ship concentration in the great United States victory.

The citation, which accompanied the award, clearly indicates the role which Griswold played in the Midway battle. It reads:

"For heroism and extraordinary achievement on an aerial flight as pilot of a scouting plane in action against enemy Japanese forces in the Battle of Midway. Participating in persistent bombing and strafing attacks against fleeing enemy forces, Ensign Griswold, with utter disregard for his own personal safety, pressed home his attack with calm courage and vigorous determination until shot down by a fierce barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

"By his fearless loyalty and uncompromising devotion to duty on this occasion he contributed materially to the victory achieved by our forces, conducted himself in keeping with the highest traditions of the U. S. Naval Service and gallantly gave up his life in the service of his country."

Benefit Dinner Slated for Soldiers and Sailors Club

General Drum and Admiral Andrews To Head Receiving Line for Event

New York, April 28.—The red, white and blue dinner dance, which will be held at the Ritz-Carlton on Friday night, May 7, for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors Club of New York, will open with a military and naval reception. In the receiving line will be Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Hugh A. Drum, Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas A. Terry, Col. and Mrs. Douglas Johnstone, Col. and Mrs. A. G. Rudd, Mr. William M. Chadbourne, president of the Soldiers and Sailors Club, and Mrs. Francis Rogers, vice president and founder of the club.

Further to carry out the patriotic note, 17-year-old Eagle Scout Theodore L. Arnheiter, jr., of Boy Scout Troop 453, official bugler for the Lexington district, Boy Scouts of America, will sound bugle calls, ending with mess call, which will be a signal for the guests—800 are expected—to file into the main ballroom for dinner. A tricolor decorative theme has been devised under the supervision of Ben Ali Haggin.

The Soldiers and Sailors Club, 283 Lexington Avenue, is the only permanent clubhouse in New York City for enlisted men in all branches of the armed services. Founded at the end of the last war, it never has been closed, day or night, in the 23 years it has been operating. Nearly four million men have passed through its doors. Today 25,000 soldiers, sailors and marines each month use its services, which include lodgings for men on leave, a restaurant-canteen, dances and other parties.

The club was enlarged soon after the present war was declared to meet the needs of the increased numbers of uniformed guests.

Sir Gerald and Lady Campbell and Lady Armstrong have been added to the list of honorary patrons for a tea dance and cocktail party to be held at Sherry's Tuesday afternoon, May 11, under the sponsorship of the Royal Standard Chapter, Daughters of the British Empire in the State of New York, Inc., for the benefit of the Victoria Home for the Aged, in Ossining. Miss Tricia Hurst has been made chairman of the junior committee. Stars of the theater and radio will take part in the program.

A concert typical of the kind the Musicians' Emergency Fund presents at East Coast Naval and Coast Guard bases will be given on Tuesday evening, May 4, when the St. Regis Roof opens for the summer with a dinner dance under the chairmanship of Mrs. Vincent Astor. Proceeds will be used to continue the concerts, which are the principal war activity of the fund.

On the program will be Ernest McChesney, tenor; Janet Reed, dancer; Josephine Griffin, soprano, and a team of duo-pianists from the Navy, First Class Seaman Arthur Whittemore and First Class Seaman Jack Lowe. The team was featured at one of the fund luncheons at the St. Regis early last fall.

The opening of the St. Regis Roof for the season is a traditional event with the fund. In previous years Mrs. Hull has been chairman of the opening party, but this year the chairmanship has been turned over to Mrs. Astor, because of her keen interest in the Navy. Mrs. Hull is a member of Mrs. Astor's committee.

The fund has recently, because of a reduced budget, given up the administering of general relief to musicians and is now concentrating all its efforts on this wartime program.

Williams, organist and choirmaster, and Mr. Leonard Young, director of dramatics at the Community House, wrote the libretto.

All the performances will be given in the auditorium at Park Avenue and Fiftieth Street at 8:30 p. m. on the evenings of May 3 to 7, inclusive. The opera committee is headed by Mrs. James B. Taylor. Mr. Preston H. Long is vice chairman, in charge of business and Mr. Young is in charge of production.

Mrs. Vincent Astor is chairman of a dinner to be given for the benefit of the Musicians' Emergency Fund at the opening of the St. Regis Roof, May 4. For many years the Musicians' Fund has helped to rehabilitate musicians in need, and since the start of the war has given concerts for the morale and recreation divisions of the Navy.

Proceeds of the St. Regis Roof opening will be used in furthering these concerts for service men at Navy bases and Army and Navy hospitals near New York.

'Keeper of Flame,' Palace, Among the Season's Best

Hepburn and Tracy Again Prove Ideal Costellar Combination in Gripping Film; Short Subjects Appropriate to the Feature

"KEEPER OF THE FLAME." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by I. A. R. Wylie, adapted to the screen by Donald Ogden Stewart, costarring Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy, with Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Forrest Tucker, Frank Craven, Horace McNally, Percy Kilbride, Audrey Christie, Darryl Hickman, Donald Meek and Howard da Silva. Directed by George Cukor. At Loew's Palace Theater.

UNLIKE the usual film play concerned with a newspaperman and a distraught young woman, "Keeper of the Flame," the attraction opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, refuses to malign the Fourth Estate, but contents itself with unfolding a consistently interesting and powerful story with overtones of possible political importance.

In adapting the I. A. R. Wylie novel to the cameras, Donald Ogden Stewart has exercised particular skill. Without any early implication of a crime's having been committed, he nevertheless has succeeded in imparting to his drama many of the elements of a fascinating detective-mystery, leavened with a retarded touch of romance and culminating in a final clarifying scene of great strength and more than casual significance in its bearing on the times. Along the way, he has managed a sufficient conflict of cross-purposes and enough seemingly irreconcilable allegiances and animosities to compile a fine suspense.

To the exposition of all this, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has contributed a perfect cast, a superb production and the infallible directorial sense of George Cukor, whose talents since have been transferred to the armed forces.

The play's engrossing developments are put under way, lugubriously enough, by the violent death of a national hero who drives his speeding car off a wrecked bridge in a cloudburst. He is mourned by the entire country and especially by the youth, whom he has organized into various "movements" throughout the land. His wife denies herself to the press until Steven O'Malley, noted correspondent recently returned from abroad, gains access to her presence by a ruse and convinces her that his only aim is to write a biography of her late husband that will keep alive the memory of his lifetime of devotion to the highest precepts of Americanism and all it has meant to the growing generations.

Rambling the wide grounds of her estate and meeting the members of her household and staff of servants, O'Malley discovers strange antagonisms toward everything that the departed Forrest ostensibly represented. There is the overly solicitous secretary of the former tycoon, his insane mother and her garrulous revelations, the suspicion of a clandestine love affair between Christine Forrest and a profligate cousin and the unconcealed bitterness of the gardener, whose life had been saved in the Argonne by his subsequent employer. By the deductions of a trained analytical mind, O'Malley senses that a vast campaign of concealment is being carried on around him and that Forrest could have been warned of the bridge's collapse and his death prevented.

Pursuit of this theory through a succession of restrained, but nonetheless exciting, events leads to the wife's revelation that her husband, intoxicated by idolatry and power, had become the master-fascist with his heart set on national dictatorship. All those youth organizations were but the instruments of future internal strife out of which he could have snatched supreme power over his fellow-countrymen.

"Message" Subordinated to Drama

If this sounds like some sort of stodgy political document, the adroitness with which the picture has been fashioned will dispel that suspicion.

Even those portions of the wife's partial defense of her husband which seem least tenable are glossed over by dramatic devices that make his devious enterprises seem less important than his widow's courage in revealing them. She would have you believe that he was the victim of a self-hypnosis growing out of public worship, unaffected and unimpressed by the meteoric careers of those other Fascist dictators across the seas. Possibly, but there certainly was an astonishing affinity of method.

These considerations, however, are subordinate to the skill of the stars and principal players in bringing conviction to the foremost characters in the play by the intelligence, repression and all-around believability of their performances.

Although the costellar opportunities are nicely balanced in "Keeper of the Flame," it leaves the impression of being Miss Hepburn's picture by the very nature of her role. The final scene of the play leaves her its great sacrificial figure. Hepburn has perhaps never given a more sensitive, sympathetic or appealing characterization than in the role of Christine Forrest, who took the only way she knew to destroy her husband and at the same time preserve the fabulous legend of his shining example as THE great American. Her final exposure of the truth O'Malley has been seeking is an interval of restrained and ringing drama, against a background of thrilling melodramatic violence.

Spencer Tracy, as O'Malley, plays a role made to order for his unique talents with quiet and sure effectiveness. Richard Whorf, as the secretary; Margaret Wycherly, the crazed mother; Audrey Christie, an inquisitive and acquisitive newspaper woman; Master Darryl Hickman and Forrest Tucker, the misunderstood cousin, all share generously in the acting honors. The film's only occasional touches of comedy are expertly supplied by Percy Kilbride, as a droll taxi driver, and Frank Craven, as the family physician, who was not deluded by the Forrest "greatness." Donald Meek, Horace McNally and Howard da Silva make minor roles conspicuously valuable.

Foremost among the auxiliary features of the new bill at the Palace is "Plan of Destruction," a study of Hitler's utilization of "geopolitika" as an instrument of world conquest. Also important are the "News of the Day" clips devoted to General Doolittle's raid on Tokyo, now released for the first time, and the President's recent visit to Mexico.

Sorely Oppressed by Mammoth Legend

KATHARINE HEPBURN

as she appears, as costar with Spencer Tracy, in the pivotal role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Keeper of the Flame," now on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Forrest Tucker, Frank Craven and Percy Kilbride are foremost in the excellent supporting cast, under the direction of George Cukor

Also a Two Million Dollar Cast!

Hollywood, Calif., April 28.—Howard Hawks' two-million dollar production of "Battle Cry," which he'll make at Warner Brothers, will have a cast that sounds like a "who's who" of Hollywood. Such people as Ingrid Bergman, Gary Cooper, Bette Davis, Ida Lupino, Humphrey Bogart, John Garfield and George Raft have signified their willingness to be in it. It's a series of separate stories of peoples of our allied nations, but they all hook together. Six writers have been working on it for months. It will take a year to make, but that doesn't matter, 'cause Hawks' "Air Force" is cleaning up everywhere. "Corvettes in Action," which he's doing now, will be as good for the sea as the "air" was for the air forces.

INGRID BERGMAN

Down Mexico Way

Bing Crosby introduced "El Rancho" some years back. He has picked up three new songs south of the border. Mexicans are saying, "Stop sending us missions—send more Crosbys." We would if we could. Bing is being mobbed everywhere, and instead of saying hello to the crowd he sings snatches of songs to them . . . Paramount signed the Puerto Rican beauty, Olga San Juan. She'll undoubtedly get a part in "Dr. Wassell." . . . Betty Hutton's mother says, "Raise your child to be an actress; then live in comfort!" Betty's bought her mother a house . . . Deanna Durbin's stand-in, Marie Osborne (Baby Osborne of the silents), gets to act in "Hers to Hold." While Marie's acting, Deanna will do her own standing-in . . . The Alan Ladds have named their baby girl Alana.

It Happens Only Here

Genevieve Tobin's mother, while waiting for a bus, started to chat with a worried looking woman who was afraid she'd be late for an appointment. Just then a taxi came along; she hailed it and asked Mrs. Tobin to ride to Beverly with her. During the trip she said, "I've been poor all my life. Couldn't afford taxis. Now I can, but my thrifty habits remain. I've had a book published. My publisher sent me out here to see about getting it made into a picture. I'm on my way to the Beverly-Wilshire to meet three studio executives." The woman's name was Rosemary Taylor and the book, "Chicken Every Sunday, or My Life With Mother's Boarders."

Short Shorts

Ken Murray's "Blackouts" have been put on 16 mm. film, and the boys overseas are already enjoying the results . . . Judy Garland's copying Helen Morgan. She sits on top of a piano to sing "Embraceable You" in "Girl Crazy" . . . Georgia Carroll makes her singing debut with Kay Kyser in "Private Miss Jones," Kay's doings and teachings . . . Mary Astor has been made an honorary member of the SPARS because of the work she's doing for them . . . Edward Arnold goes from Philadelphia and the war loan drive to Montreal to help with the drive there.

Ramblings!

Since Penny Singleton, of "Blondie" fame, is married to a marine captain, marines have taken to calling their favorite officer "Dagwood" . . . Bob Hope, after Washington, gets a three-day holiday in his home town, Cleveland. They love him there. I hope he won't do what Jack Benny did about St. Joseph. They loved him there, too, but he never arrived . . . Capt. Mark Huber of the merchant marine is the spittin' image of Winston Churchill. In Canada they thought he was "Winnie" incognito. He acts, too. Is up for a part at Twentieth . . . That life-size undraped statue of Mae West in her apartment is blacked out, too. She draped it.

Good Luck!

Charlottee Greenwood is a riot on a new air show to replace Skelton for the summer. It's called "Miss Charlotte." She sings her famous song, "David." . . . Gus Schilling and Bert Wheeler were lunching at the Brown Derby when another actor walked in. Said Gus, "That guy's so conceited, every time he enters the Derby he thinks he's wearing it!"

Gossip From Gotham

New York, April 28.

Brig. Gen. Pat Hurley, the former Secretary of War, has become one of the few men Stalin trusts. He permitted Hurley to inspect the battle zones in Russia. Stalin's respect for General Hurley was born of their first meeting, before the American invasion of Africa. "You are not doing so well," Stalin had greeted him . . . "You didn't do so well either, in the first year of war," Hurley snapped . . . "We would have done better, if we had more help from you," said Stalin . . . "You would have had more help," Hurley countered, "if you hadn't made that pact with the Nazis" . . . Stalin said something to the interpreter. Hurley asked the interpreter: "What did he say about me?" Stalin nodded, and the interpreter said: "Comrade Stalin say you tough baby."

'Kiki' Continues to Reap Big Rewards!

Hollywood, April 28 (INS)—That smart little business woman, Mary Pickford, has sold the Belasco play, "Kiki" to William Goetz at Twentieth Century-Fox for $50,000. No play in the history of the theater has had a more interesting story. Lenore Ulric created the role of the French Gamin, the naughty Kiki, who marries a man of wealth and then proceeds to embarrass him by her antics.

MARY PICKFORD

After Lenore made one of her greatest hits and the play ran for several years, Joseph Schenck bought it for Norma Talmadge and paid $100,000. Later, when sound came in, it was chosen as a vehicle for Mary Pickford. Belasco asked an additional $50,000 for the talkie rights. It is the intention of Twentieth to make it into a musical, so I have an idea either Alice Faye or Betty Grable will get it.

While young O'Connor won't have to don whiskers to play the older man who falls for a young girl, it will be a step up the romantic ladder for him. Who knows? By the time he is 19, if he isn't in the Army, he'll be playing character parts!

ᔓᔕ

The cynical "Tall Girls," who have been writing me they don't believe a word about Hollywood glamorizing sirens over 6 feet, had better wait and see "Private Miss Jones" before tossing more brick-bats. M-G-M has lined up six luscious beauties, all over 6 feet tall, for an entire sequence in the Kathryn Grayson movie and Director George Sidney says they are honeys. The honeys, to wit, are: Helen O'Hara, who stands 6 feet 4½ in her shoes; Bunny Waters (Al Jolson's heart) who is the same size; Sylvia Liggett, 6 feet 3¾; Dorothy Ford, 6 feet 5½, and Susan Paley, the "shortie" of the group, who is 6 feet 2½ inches.

At this writing no deal has actually been set, but you needn't be surprised if Harry Cohn films the life of Fred Waring. The studios never do anything by halves and these musical biographies are popular these days. Tom Waring is writing the story and if it is approved by Columbia it will be brought to the screen with the Waring boys probably playing their own roles.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Lewis Mad Because Northern Operators Stood Pat

HERE IS what happened behind the scenes last week in the coal mine negotiations which made John L. Lewis so boiling mad.

Charles O'Neill, representing the Northern coal operators, flatly refused to make any counterproposals to the United Mine Workers' demand for a $2 a day increase. Lewis had proposed that even if the coal operators couldn't meet those demands, they should offer something and then, by continued negotiations, it might be possible to find a basis for agreement.

"Offer us something, even if it's only 2 cents a day increase," pleaded the big miner, "so we'll have something to negotiate on."

"No," we're standing pat," replied O'Neill, knowing he had President Roosevelt behind him, also wanting to get the dispute before the War Labor Board.

"We will agree to no wage increase."

"All right, will you offer counterproposals to some of our other demands, not involving money?" Lewis persisted.

This met with another turndown from O'Neill, who had insisted almost from the start of conciliation talks in New York that the mine dispute be turned over to the War Labor Board. And he knew that any counterproposal by him would delay reference to the board.

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, you know our position," exploded Lewis. "If we don't have a new contract when the 30-day extension expires on April 30, we won't be trespassing on your property."

For Big Taxpayers

Since publication of the recent Merry-Go-Round report regarding U. S. Treasury-Thomas J. Watson tax difficulties, I have been informed that Mr. Watson paid the Treasury's additional tax assessment of around $350,000 in 1940, and that his present claim against the Treasury for a refund will not be pressed.

Mr. Watson lodged this claim on advice of tax counsel only because of precedents set by the Tax Court which indicated the original tax returns were correct. He has informed me, however, that at a time like this, the last thing he would want to do is press a tax claim against his government, with which he may sometimes disagree, but which, his long public record shows, he will always defend and support.

In fairness to Mr. Watson, I think these additional facts should be known, and that it might be a healthy thing for some other big taxpayers to know about and follow his example.

Prewar Antifascists

The War Department has just received a protest from several forthright members of Congress, who demand a "complete investigation" of charges made in this column that the Army is discriminating against officer candidates who served with Loyalist forces during the Spanish civil war.

The protest, signed by Representatives Clare Luce (Republican) of Connecticut, John Coffee and Warren Magnuson of Washington, Chet Holifield of California, all Democrats, reads in part: "Reports which have been given to us, and which we have no reason to question, reveal that not a single soldier in the foregoing group (Loyalist vets) who attended officer candidate schools has been granted his commission.

"Military experts regard the civil war in Spain as the opening round of the present tragic conflict in which we are now engaged. It is inconceivable that the United States Army would now penalize any young man who voluntarily fought under the colors of the Spanish Loyalist flag against the Axis by refusing him the right to become an officer in the American Army.

"Certainly," the protesting Congressmen continue, "this country, in its greatest crisis, will not deny these young men another chance to pit their strength and intelligence against those same Axis forces in other areas where our soldiers are now fighting under the American flag."

Capital Chaff

The nickname "Small Shot" still clings to Lieut. Gen. B. B. Somervell, Chief of the Army Supply Force. It's a play on the initials B. B., or BB-shot . . . Pentagon police report that 100 people a day get lost in that building. . . In the course of his Latin-American tour, Vice President Wallace gave friendly encouragement to Spanish Republican exiles, some of them working for the overthrow of Franco. . . A visiting Brazilian official, Rafael Fernandez, governor of the state of Rio Grande do Norte, says there are between 3000 and 4000 U. S. civilians in the city of Natal alone. This is the hopping-off point for the air transport route across the South Atlantic.

Dies Committee Charges

PERSONAL grudges may creep into the question of whether certain Government officials are really subversive—as branded by the Dies Committee—if the Kerr Committee isn't careful.

One of those branded "subversive" is William E. Dodd, jr., son of the former United States Ambassador to Germany, whose father was a great friend of Woodrow Wilson and a famous historian at the University of Chicago. Young Dodd was a violent Nazi hater during his father's term as Ambassador, was one of the reasons why the Hitler regime intimated to the State Department that they wanted the elder Dodd recalled.

Later, young Dodd made the mistake of running for Congress against powerful Representative Howard Smith, who has dominated northern Virginia for a quarter of a century. Smith has many friends in Congress.

Now, young Dodd is branded as "subversive."

A bloc of Congressmen headed by Georgia's Malcolm Tarver also bombarded members of the Kerr Committee, appointed to investigate Dies' charges, regarding Dr. Frederick L. Schuman, political analyst of the Federal Communications Commission's Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service. He too had been branded as "subversive" by the Dies Comittee, and Representative Tarver demanded that Representative Kerr of North Carolina, head of the special comittee, produce evidence to the contrary.

"There is no evidence," replied Kerr firmly. "Dr. Schuman is an outstanding authority on Soviet Russia and has written a great number of books on the subject, but this doesn't make him a subversive. We have examined his writings carefully. There's nothing in them to back up the Dies Committee charges."

Representatives Lane Powers of New Jersey and Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, two members of Kerr's subcommittee, also defended Schuman, but Tarver contended that the subcommittee should have spent more time reviewing Schuman's background.

"I'm not trying to do the man an injustice," he said, "but I think we should do our best to avoid a controversy with the Dies Committee, which has made a through study of this subject."

Other members also protested that the subcommittee report might provoke a fight with the Dies Committee, but Kerr calmy observed that his job was not to whitewash the Dies Committee.

POST PEOPLE

Frank L. Dennis

Walk into the office of The Washington Post looking for a job and you'll be referred to a pleasant, soft-spoken, young giant who will ask you to show your ability as a writer by submitting a sketch of your life and experience. That's Frank Dennis, assistant managing editor of The Post. Frank looks like an athlete; he wasn't much of one at Oklahoma University because he was too busy earning a living. He had edited the high school paper and set the type by hand himself; in college his job on the college daily paid his way through. His next step was to the Kansas City Star, where he learned about practical politics watching the Prendergast machine, and stored up ideas for a novel he's writing. Dennis worked on the Boston Herald while studying political science at the Harvard Graduate School and later while attending Harvard Law School. Harvard Law is considered a job in itself; Frank is proud of the fact that he was able to get his LL.B. while working full-time, besides. He must have been a pretty good lawyer—Tommy Corcoran offered him a job. But Frank went back to Oklahoma City (he comes from California but married an Oklahoma girl), as reporter, copyreader, city editor, and finally assistant managing editor. In 1939 the Associated Press invited him to address its convention on one of his special hobbies—the laws protecting the right of privacy. After the talk he was stopped in the corridor by a managing editor who offered him a job on the spot; it was Alexander F. Jones of The Washington Post. Dennis came here as city editor and became assistant managing editor a few months later. Asked about the personnel problems brought on by the war, Frank comments: "There's no shortage of good people who want to work on The Washington Post."

R. B. Thurman Is Found Dead; Rites in Utah

Richard B. Thurman, 69, of the Belvedere Apartments, an attorney for the Department of Justice, died at his desk late yesterday, apparently of a heart attack.

He was found by a charwoman about 6:30, and she thought him asleep. Later it was found that he was dead.

The son of the late Samuel I. Thurman, a former chief justice of Utah, he was in the War Risks Claim Division of the Justice Department.

He was a native of Lehigh, Utah, and came here eight years ago. He had been here previously as the secretary of Senator Joseph L. Rawlins, from Utah, and studied law at George Washington University. He returned to his native State and practiced law until his appointment in the Justice Department eight years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mamie Thurman, and three children by a former marriage, James A. Thurman, of Washington, and Richard S. Thurman, of Utah, and a daughter, Mrs. Frances Edwards, of Washington.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but burial will be in Utah.

Flier Dies in Crash

Jeffers Aroused As Patterson Gets Last Word in Row

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers is "hopping mad" because he believes the Senate War Investigating Committee gave Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson a chance to have the "last say" in the committee's public reenactment of their battle over materials priorities, sources close to Jeffers reported last night.

Patterson was to have been heard yesterday before the committee took testimony from Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal. He telephoned Committee Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, that it would be more "convenient" for him to appear later.

Jeffers was to have closed the committee's investigation next Monday, but as a result of the 'phone conversation, Patterson was assigned the closing spot Tuesday. Truman assured reporters, however, that all witnesses would be given a chance for "rebuttal, if they want it."

Silver Deficit Threatens, Senate Committee Told

By the Associated Press

Members of the Senate Banking Committee heard yesterday that the Nation faces a silver deficit of perhaps 48 million ounces this year and learned that there is possibility of agreement on a plan to use Treasury silver to supplement other supplies needed in the war effort.

The estimate of lagging supplies of silver, which has grown rapidly in importance in war industry, came from Richard J. Lund, director of the miscellaneous metals division of the War Production Board in testimony before the committee.

The suggestion that an agreement might be possible on a bill releasing the Treasury stock solely "in furtherance of the war effort" came from Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah, after Senator Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island, author of one of the bills under consideration, said he would not object to legalizing a minimum price of 71.11 an ounce, the Treasury cost, as the sale price, instead of 50 cents, the figure in his bill.

FCC Official Ready To Give Probers Financial Data

Clifford J. Durr, Federal Communications Commissioner, said yesterday that he was prepared to tell a congressional committee about his personal financial affairs, without being subpenaed.

Eugene L. Garey, counsel of the select House committee to investigate the FCC, said he was prepared to subpena Durr, and also to subpena the information. If Durr is called, he said, it would be to a closed hearing for the present.

Durr had rejected a questionnaire from Garey by saying that while he had nothing to conceal the information demanded was of a personal nature. Garey replied that appropriate procedures would be taken to compel Durr to answer.

Government Girl Plane Fund Spirals Upward to $138,466

Spiraling briskly upward yesterday—four days after the close of the Government Girl warplane campaign—the already impressive roster of contributors was increased 6182.

The total fund for purchasing the Army and Navy planes now stands at $138,446, realized from dollar contributions of Federal employes.

The War Department again was high with $3083 for the day and the General Accounting Office second of the day with $1137. Total contributions by the War Department now stands at $28,675.

Although the official close for the campaign was last Saturday and practically every Government agency in Washington has been heard from, falling away of daily contributions has not yet been noted.

"We expect to be busy taking in money for at least the remainder of the week," L. L. Collie, Chief of the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants at the Treasury Department, said.

"Names of guards of honor are not coming in fast enough," Miss Eleanore Leech, secretary of the special committee from the Council of Personnel Administration, announced yesterday.

Including those submitted to Miss Leech yesterday, fewer than half of the guards of honor have been officially listed, she explained. Agency Government Girl campaign leaders are urged to submit "in writing" official lists of honor guards chosen.

But thrills every minute are being experienced among the thousands of Government Girl workers.

Actress To Give $250

Miss Louise Card, campaign manager for the Bureau of Weights and Standards of the Commerce Department, breathlessly announced that Olivia de Havilland, famous motion picture actress was going to contribute $250 to the Government Girl fund.

Miss Card explained that a representative of Warner Brothers had telephoned her the information last night and that the money would be in the name of "anyone she wished."

She has not yet decided.

Miss Card recently wrote a letter to the screen star asking her if she wished to contribute a dollar to the Government Girl fund. (She had heard that Miss de Havilland was to appear in a picture called "Government Girl."

"I was certainly thrilled when Mr. Gordon of Warner Brothers notified me about the $250 check," Miss Card said.

Six ace Government girls were chosen by the War Department yesterday as honor guards. They were selected from a list of 17.

Their names drawn from an Air Trophy by Col. Horace Shelmire, executive to Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, the War Department's choice includes Miss Irene Leftcheck, Signal Corps; Marjorie Roure, Quartermaster General; Galia McEntree, Military District of Washington; Betty Brussel, Secretary of War Office; Shirley Parks, Air Force; Beth Meredith, AGO.

Two honor guards are to be named at a similar ceremony by the Department of Commerce this afternoon, according to Mrs. Frances Kelley, who has managed the Government Girl campaign there.

They will be chosen from a list of nine including Virginia Larsen and Katie Logan, Census Bureau; Gertrude Edmonston, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Frankie Edwards, Civil Aeronautics; Gretchen Kiel, Secretary's Office; Elaine Cocke-Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Margaret Atchison, Standards and Rosemary Nolan, Weather Bureau.

Additional honor guards listed with Miss Leech are Henryetta Burbank, Civil Aeronautics Board; Esther Ryan, Alien Property Custodian; Helen Marie Koontz, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.; Celia Wicks, Library of Congress, and Alice Brums of the Office of Defense Transportation.

To Meet Friday Night

All honor guards will meet Friday night at 8:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Department of Commerce for instructions and rehearsal, it was announced by Donald S. Dawson, chairman of the special committee and director of personnel for the RFC.

The meeting is considered an important one due to the preparation of details of the christening which are to be presented for the first time, he said.

The chairman said that plans were going forward at a rapid pace and expressed his opinion that the huge celebration and christening, in which both the Army and Navy will be major participants May 9, would be one of the most spectacular ever to have been staged in wartime Washington.

Postwar Navy Size Seen Topic Of Controversy

Development of a controversy on the postwar size of the United States Navy was forecast yesterday by Capt. Leland P. Lovette, director of Navy Public Relations, who advised his staff of information officers to prepare themselves accordingly.

Lovette spoke at the concluding session of a three-day conference of Naval District Public Relations officers.

He predicted that "in a year or so" there would be a movement to curtail the size of the Navy with the argument revolving around "whether we are going to keep a Navy of any size." The Navy's information officers, Lovette said, should begin now to prepare themselves for this future issue by "reading everything you can get your hands on" about the functions and purposes of seapower.

Army Shoe Stock Of $15,000,000 Has Total of 249 Sizes

Boston, April 28 (AP).—The Army took the lid off the biggest shoe box in the world today and revealed the purchase of 40 million pairs of shoes since Pearl Harbor in 249 different sizes ranging from 3½ AAA to 15½ EEE and 32 different types particularly designed for fighting in every quarter of the globe.

In a conducted tour through the Boston Quartermaster Depot, which is charged with the procurement of virtually all footwear for the entire Army, its nurses and the WAACS, newpapermen were shown the results of an expenditure of 15 million dollars a month for shoes.

"No other Army in the world provides its soldiers with so many sizes in shoes," said Lieut. Col. John T. Curtis, director of procurement, adding that the German army had less than one-third as many sizes and no half-sizes.

Man Who Sent Last Corregidor Message Revealed

By the Associated Press

Not quite a year ago, on May 5, the message started coming through:

"The jig is up. Everyone is bawling like a baby . . . I know how a mouse feels. Caught in a trap . . . Tell mother how you heard from me . . . Stand by . . ."

It was the last report before Corregidor's fall ended organized resistance to the Japanese in the Philippines. Not an official message, it was just a radio operator's "conversation," a disjointed final account sent through by Corp. Irving Strobing of Brooklyn, N. Y., as he waited in a Corregidor tunnel for the inevitable end.

At last, the War Department reported yesterday, official word has been received that Strobing is alive and a prisoner of the Japanese. His name was included in a prisoner list published by the department April 24, but it was not until yesterday that officials recalled that Strobing had radioed the last message from the Philippines.

THE FOUR FREEDOMS BY NORMAN ROCKWELL

With the sure preception of a great artist, Norman Rockwell couched The Four Freedoms in American idiom as he selected for his subjects real people and painted them faithfully to the last wrinkle, callus, crow's foot and shoulder stoop. They have shared America's fun and America's sorrow. And now they touch the tenderest emotions of other Americans at war. As they depict Freedom of Speech, Freedom of Worship, Freedom from Want and Freedom from Fear every beholder realizes these precepts are worth defending from despots who would destroy them.

THE FREEDOM SCROLL is a name-document, signed by every-day Americans who love their country and prove it by buying bonds to deliver her Four Freedoms from all danger. Write your name there. Many illustrious ones in modern history-making will be there, too. When the War Bond Show is over, the scroll will be presented to President Roosevelt.
